Bethlehem Hearing on C. I. O. Accusations to Open Today.

Richberg Speech Praised by Borah

Discrimination Against Union Men Charged by Board.

By William V. Nessly.

Refusing any delay, as was requested by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the National Labor Relations Board yesterday prepared to open today its hearings into charges of intimidation and coercion of employes by the huge independent steel concern.

It designated Frank Bloom as trial examiner to conduct the hearing, and assigned Martin Rose, Leonard Keller, and Earl Shawe, of its Pittsburgh offices, to appear as attorneys for the board. The hearing is to be held at Franklin Boro, Pa., near Pittsburgh.

The sessions will mark resumption of the struggle by John L. Lewis' vast Committee for Industrial Organization with the independent concern, following the recent strike at plants of Bethlehem, Republic and other companies.

Discrimination Charged.

The walkout, called primarily to force the independents to sign agreements with the C. I. O., ended with Gov. Martin Davey, of Ohio, calling out troops to permit reopening of the plants in his State, and a "back-to-work" movement, which Bethlehem is accused of conducting among its employes.

Bethlehem is charged by the labor board with discrimination against the C. I. O.'s Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, and with fostering and, supporting, financially and otherwise, the Employe Representation Plan, alleged to be a "company union." The plan is said to be similar to that which was abandoned by Carnegie-Illinois Steel following Labor Board charges and lengthy hearings.

Other Charges Outlined.

The corporation, likewise, is charged with discharging or demoting and transferring to less profitable and less pleasant work, employes who engaged in union activity. It maintained arms in its plants, the Board charges, and armed men to patrol the streets of Johnstown during the recent strike.

Keeping employes and organizers under surveillance to learn what workers were joining the C. I. O. union, and causing union members and organizers to be unjustly arrested, sentenced, attacked and beaten also are laid to the company.

Plants at Sparrows Point, Md.; Johnstown, Bethlehem, Steelton, Lebanon and other points in Pennsylvania; Seattle, Wash., and San Francisco, Oakland, Vernon and Los Angeles, Calif., are enumerated in the board's complaint.

Meanwhile, the surge of Labor Day oratory throughout the country, centering about the split between the American Federation of Labor, headed by William Green and the C. I. O., continued to echo in the Capital.

Borah Comments.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, voiced the view that "labor is undoubtedly making progress and gaining more power," but he added that "I have no fear that in the final adjustment of things labor will get any more than is justly due it. This is merely another phase of the same fight that labor has had to make for many years."

Windsors Head for Hungary Following Snubbing by Kents

Brother and Wife Fail to Visit Castle Although They Passed Nearby; Ex-King and Wife Quit Honeymoon Nest for Hunting Lodge.

By the United Press.

Vienna, Sept. 7.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor today gave up their honeymoon castle and left for Hungary as gossips buzzed about a "scandalous snubbing" which the Duchess of Kent gave Edward's American-born bride.

SNUBBER.

SNUBBEE

Viennese society and members of banished royalty who live in Austrian exile said the Duchess of Kent's refusal to visit the Windsors at Wasserleonburg Castle—although the Kents passed within a few miles of the place—might precipitate a blow-off in the ostracism of former King Edward by his family and the British government.

The Duchess of Kent, formerly Princess Marina, of Greece, and her husband—he and Edward have been "pals" since childhood—passed by Wasserleonburg en route to Yugoslavia from Salzburg and Poland without so much as pausing for a cup of tea.

The Duchess of Windsor, it was understood, invited the Kents to visit Wasserleonburg before she and Edward left for Hungary to take a hunting lodge.

Marina's answer was evasive, society talk said, and led the Windsors to expect the Kents yesterday. When the Kents failed to arrive,

Episcopal Bid To C. I. O. Aide Vexes Manning

Bishop Says Church May Be Involved in Labor's Factional Disputes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 7.—The Right Rev. William T. Manning, Episcopal Bishop of New York, sharply criticized today the management of the Episcopal Church's forthcoming Cincinnati convention because it included meetings of the Church League for Industrial Democracy on the tentative convention program.

He held that an invitation to Homer Martin, of the United Automobile Workers' Union, a C. I. O. unit, to speak at one of the league meetings, was placing the church on his side of the C. I. O.-A. F. L. controversy.

In a letter intended for publication in Episcopal weeklies, the bishop asked: "Should any organization be allowed to use the general convention for its economic and political propaganda?"

He said "there is widespread dissatisfaction, and among many of our people a stronger feeling than that, at this action."

"A Partisan Character."

The church league was described by him as having a "militantly partisan and radical character" and he said "many are questioning both the propriety and the fairness of giving such special prominence at our convention to this organization."

An official tentative program of the convention, to be held in Cincinnati, October 6 to 20, inclusive, lists meetings of the Church League for Industrial Democracy forum in Mayfair Theater on 9 of the 15 days.

A forword states that "various official organizations of the church, together with a number of other groups having no such connection, rightly take advantage of the opportunity to bring their work and programs before those gathered at the convention."

"It must be borne in mind, however," the foreword adds, "that while the opinions expressed and the action taken at these meetings may be of importance, the church takes official action and expressed official opinion only in the actual sessions of the two houses (bishops and deputies) of the convention."

Child Drowned By Playmate, Police Believe

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—Five-year-old Nancy Glenn was slain, her head held face downward in a pool of mud and water until she suffocated, an autopsy disclosed tonight as police sought to prevent further crimes against children.

The girl had not been criminally attacked, coroner's physicians said, and police said it was possible she had been killed by a playmate.

Meanwhile, Philip Krohl, jr., 27-year-old newspaper vendor, was held without bail at a hearing before Mayor S. Davis Wilson on charges of criminally attacking 5-year-old Helen Whebley and her brother, Frank. Wilson announced that District Attorney Charles F. Kelley would be asked to present the case to the grand jury tomorrow.

Confesses to "Murder."

Krohl, arrested last night shortly after the mother of the two children reported them missing, allegedly confessed to the mayor he had attacked the children in Fairmount Park and then killed them Police, park guards and Boy Scouts searched the park all night for the bodies and the Schuylkill River was dragged.

But shortly before noon today the two children were found, walking near their home.

Dr. John Turner, police surgeon, testified that both children had been assaulted criminally, and Detective Andrew McDermott told Wilson that Krohl had been arrested twice previously on charges of molesting women.

Pair Held and Freed.

Two material witnesses—Samuel Dielasio, 66-year-old Italian truck gardener, and a 15-year-old youth named Matteo, who lives with him—were held in the Glenn slaying because their home is near the desolate road where Joseph C. Glenn discovered his daughter's body, hidden by a sheet of rusty metal, last night.

Later, Dielasio and the youth were released unconditionally, and police concentrated on the theory Nancy might have been slain by a playmate, possibly in a childish quarrel.

(Picture on Page 6)

Burglars yesterday entered the Georgetown home of James Roosevelt, carrying away, among other articles of value, a gold watch given him by the paternal grandfather for whom he was named.

Reached at Hyde Park, N. Y., where he is vacationing with his father, Roosevelt told The Post:

"From what the police have told me of the burglary I believe all they got of value were personal effects, a watch, given by my grandfather, a set of cuff links and shirt studs."

Police withheld a full report of the burglary, but it was learned that the robbers overlooked several thousand dollars worth of jewelry.

Police believe that the robbery occurred between 3 and 5 p. m. The Roosevelt house, at 3331 O street northwest, had been visited by policemen early in the afternoon in a routine check-up.

The house has been occupied only by a butler since Roosevelt left. The butler, Frank Dedrick, discovered the burglary when he returned from a week-end vacation.

Roosevelt said he would not return until about September 15, when he originally planned to be back, and that a check-up on the loss would be made by Stephen Early, another Presidential secretary.

Police said the robbery apparently was the work of amateurs. Several suspects were being questioned last night, a reliable source reported, but police refused to confirm it.

The robbers made a shambles of the house. Empty whisky and wine bottle bottles were scattered over the floors.

Clothing owned both by Roosevelt and Dedrick was strewn about.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Sept. 8. Fresh regiments of veteran Japanese regular army troops smashed China's defense line at the northern edge of the Yangtzepoo area of the International Settlement today and carried the 28-day-old Shanghai battle into open country.

Chinese admitted their line had been broken by the 48-hour Japanese attack, in which Nipponese infantrymen fought with the bayonet behind a curtain of artillery shells and aerial bombs.

[Japanese took over for military purposes the American Seventh Day Adventist mission property in Yangtzepoo, according to the Associated Press. The headquarters of the world conference of the church in Washington reported missionaries already had evacuated their property in Shanghai, as well as medical institutions in Hongkew and other outlying area.

Invaders to Shell Hospitals.

[The Japanese army warned that neither Christian churches, Chinese temples, hospitals nor schools would be spared from demolition if the Chinese continued to use them for troop concentrations.

[As the fighting brought fresh menace to the boundaries of the International Settlement, all American and British members of the Shanghai volunteer corps were ordered to return to active duty.

At 3 a. m. heavy fighting was under way all along the northwestern perimeter of the International Settlement.

There were continuous explosions of large-caliber artillery shells as Chinese and Japanese batteries engaged in a deafening duel.

The Chinese said 800 Japanese troops were in the column which smashed through their line in Yangtzepoo.

Rear Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commanding the Japanese Third Battle Fleet, again sent his bluejackets ashore to support more than 70,000 infantrymen which the Japanese army commander, Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui, has thrown into the offensive.

New Warning Asks Nationals To Leave China

2 Consulates Are Ordered Closed; to Evacuate Service Families.

By Franklyn Waltman.

As the anger of American businessmen in Shanghai over President Roosevelt's week-end warning to them resounded here, American authorities yesterday moved with greater firmness on several sectors of the Sino-Japanese conflict to compel nationals of this country to leave war-torn China.

The State Department revealed that American Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, at Nanking, had instructed the American consuls at Foochow and Amoy to send warnings to all Americans in their districts, to proceed at once to such places of concentration as the consuls considered safest and easiest of access.

Johnson further instructed the two consuls to close their consulates when they have done everything reasonably possible to effectuate the withdrawal of Americans from their districts, unless, in the meanwhile, the situation should definitely change for the better.

To Evacuate Service Families.

The Navy Department announced that Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet and in charge of American interests at Shanghai, had decided to evacuate at the earliest practicable date all dependents of American naval and marine personnel in China. Te families of the officers and men of the Navy and Marine Corps will be taken to Manila in the Philippine Islands from whence those so desiring will be transferred to the United States as rapidly as transportation becomes necessary.

The Navy announced that the ships to be employed for this duty will be the U. S. S. Canopus, a submarine tender; the gunboat Sacramento, the Naval Transport Chaumont, now en route from Hawaii to Shanghai with 1,200 Marines aboard; the Naval Transport Henderson, en route to Shanghai on a regularly scheduled cruise, and the Gold Star, a transport-cargo vessel, now en route to Kobe, Japan, with dependents of navel personnel from China.

Leaves Canceled.

The War Department announced that "in order to prevent unnecessary exposure of non-combatants in China," orders had been issued canceling all leaves for Army personnel to visit China and forbidding Army personnel ordered to China

Nurnberg Throng Hears Hitler Pledge Aid to Japan and Italy

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 7.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler joined Germany, Italy and Japan today in a "defensive" world struggle against communism.

In his annual manifesto to the nation, delivered at the Nazi congress, Hitler frankly voiced his readiness to stand by both Italy and Japan against bolshevism.

Diplomats attending the congress speculated whether Hitler, by referring to "defensive fight," was attempting to forestall a Japanese call for active assistance on the basis of the Japanese-German anti-communist agreement or was for shadowing active participation in the Asiatic conflict.

Responsible sources indicated, however, that Germany did not intend to be dragged into the Sino-Japanese war on a basis of communism.

No Doubt of Solidarity.

Hitler's manifesto, read to the Nazi congress by Adolf Wagner, Bavarian Nazi leader, while Der Fuehrer listened from a platform seat, left no doubt of Germany's solidarity with Japan and Italy against "communist confusion" in both the East and the West.

The Nazis consider the entire world, with the exception of these countries and Portugal, as partially "communistic."

One of the Congress features—the anti-Bolshevist exhibition—showed a huge map. On it North and South America, as well as England, and even Iceland, were included in territory under "communistic influence."

Opening the congress, Rudolf Hess, Hitler's minister without portfolio, asserted that national socialism means construction with love of work, anr communism means construction with forced labor.

Repeals Demand for Colonies.

A strong point in Hitler's proclamation was his emphatic reiteration of Germany's demand for return of the colonies she lost during the World War. He called the attitude of other powers toward this demand "incomprehensible."

Stocks Plunge To Lows for '37 In Selling Wave

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 7.—Many millions of dollars in quoted values vanished on the stock exchange today when numerous issues plummeted $1 to $10 a share in big selling attributed by brokers partly to war fright.

It was the biggest break since July 21, 1933, measured by the Associated Press average price of 60 stocks. This average at the finish was off $3.50 at $60.20.

Volume of trading, measured by other severe declines in recent years, was not unusually large. Despite gaping losses which ranged to as much as $14 in J. I. Case, transactions totaled 1,871,150 shares, impressive only by comparison with the recent extreme dullness. The total Friday, the last full session before the Labor Day recess, was 690,900.

While war threats have become an old story to the financial district, the last few years, international bickerings today seemed to join with business doubts in arraying traders predominantly on the bear side.

Commodities Go Up.

Nothing Paid Insulin Inventors; Others Took $400,000 Profit

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The discoverers of insulin did not receive one cent for their product, which paid others profits of $400,000 its first year, the American Chemical Society was told today in a discussion of medical patents.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, spokesman of the American Medical Association, said Sir Frederick Banting, the medical man in the discovery, received $1 for the patents, not being allowed by medical ethics to accept more. He said Sir Frederick's four associates, who were not physicians, have had the advantage of such royalties.

Dr. E. L. Hutchinson, now director of the institute which was founded as a result of the discovery, replied that Sir Frederick was offered the dollar, but didn't take it. Also, he said, the other four did not take a cent either.

Some of the royalties, he said, were assigned to each of the five solely for further research work.

Dr. Fishbein suggested creation of a holding corporation under the American Medical Association to administer medical patents in the interest of the pubic. He pointed out that in 1939 the original patents on insulin will run out. Then he said anyone can make it. And if, he added, a "fly-by-night" organization makes it poorly, a dose of the imperfect insulin is likely to be fatal.

The chemists did not agree that a corporation under the American Medical Association is the solution. Dr. Hutchinson said a better way would be an independent, non-profit corporation, under trustees selected from the foremost scientific societies, including the medical society.

Attempt to Bottle Up Red Fleet Seen

The European Crisis.

A British oil tanker was reported halted by a "pirate" submarine near the Dodecanese Islands and another underseas boat was reported to have fired a torpedo at a British motor tanker near the French African port of La Goulette.

Britain and France kept alive the 12-power antipirate parley proposals. Russia accepted an invitation to attend but made pointed observations in her note of acceptance, and Italy was undecided on the point, pending reported conversations between Hitler and Mussolini on the subject.

War Clouds Gather.

By the Associated Press.

Blunt words and new "incidents" yesterday heightened Europe's tension and brought its great powers more definitely into Fascist vs. Communist line-ups.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler pledged Germany's alliance with Italy and Japan in a defensive front against Communism, while Soviet Russia, in an official statement, denounced as "unsatisfactory" Il Duce's terse reply to charges of sinking two Russian ships, and made clar she wants an indictment of Italy at Friday's European conference on piracy in the Mediterranean.

[Meanwhile, a "pirate" submarine was reported yesterday to have halted the British oil tanker Pegasus, bound for a Russian port, near Italy's fortified Dodecanese Islands, indicating a possible attempt to bottle up Russia's sea route into the Mediterranean, the United Press announced.]

British Ship Fired On.

At the other end of the Mediterranean an unidentified warship was reported by Lloyds to have fired a torpedo at the British motor tanker Harpa as she approached the French African port of La Goulette. The torpedo missed.

Britain and France grimly kept alive the 12-power anti-pirate parley, determined to formulate a policy to clear the seas of marauders whether or not angry Mussolini attended.

This question was further complicated by the Soviet's acceptance of her invitation to the conference, contained in a note to British and French embassies. The note also included Moscow's denunciation of Il Duce, and asked pointedly why Germany, not a Mediterranean power, was invited. Russia asked also that the Spanish Madrid-Valencia government be included in the talks as one of the victims of "pirate warships."

The Soviet note, reiterating accusations of Italy and declaring further attacks on merchant shipping would be "intolerable," was regarded as making Italy's participation in the piracy discussions dubious.

Il Duce Apt to Accept.

A Rome official, who said Italy still was considering the conference bid in a "cordial spirit," indicated Mussolini would make acceptance conditional on guarantees Russia's accusation would be outlawed at the

Ickes to Launch Nation-Wide Drive to Establish Local Housing Authorities

Legal Rules for Slum Elimination Effort Being Drafted.

By Sidney Olson.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes will launch in the near future a Nation-wide drive for creation of local housing authorities as the second step in preliminary establishment of the United States Housing Authority, it was learned last night.

The first step, drafting of legal machinery—rules and regulations—under which the newly created agency will operate, is well under way, Interior Department officials said.

They said public pressure for inauguration of the agency is mounting swiftly, with 62 projects of the old PWA program already approved under the former plan, but abandoned under the President's program of expenditure curtailment. All preliminary surveys have been made.

51 Projects Under Way.

There are also 51 projects now under way, which will come under supervision of the new Authority. Of these 13 are now complete and 13 more will open up shortly.

Thus the Authority-to-be will begin operations with a back-log of 52 projects ready for the starting signal, 26 completed and 25 more under way. Scores of others are planned, totaling millions of dollars of construction, which would be approved in jigtime if the Authority were under way.

The beginning of operations awaits only an executive order by the President and appointment by him of an administrator by the Authority.

Post Also Mentioned.

This $10,000-a-year plum is likely to fall to Howard A. Gray, PWA housing director, according to indications. Gray's candidacy is backed by Ickes, in whose department the new Authority had been placed, and the President is understood to be ready to approve the nomination of Gray on the theory that the latter has proven his ability to team effectively with the mercurial Interior Department chieftain.

The only outsider's name mentioned prominently for the job is that of Langdon Post, of the American Federation of Housing Authorities, which lobbied for the Wagner-Steagal bill during the last Congress. Post, however, was violently opposed to placing the Authority under supervision of the Interior. He led a national campaign on the issue and thus is not exactly on intimate terms with Ickes at present.

Announcement Delay Seen.

Ickes conferred with the President before Mr. Roosevelt left for Hyde Park and is believed to have recommended Gray at the time. Announcement of an appointment may not be made until the President's return here for the September 17—Constitution Day—exercises, and may even be postponed until after his projected Western swing.

Ickes and the scores of municipalities which will participate in the vast low-cost housing program contemplated in the $500,000,000 act are urging haste in establishing the new agency, in order to stimulate the still-depressed construction industry.

The appointment requires Senate confirmation, as the act contained a phrase to the effect that all officers paid more than $7,500 yearly must be Senate confirmed.

Only 50 Agencies.

Ickes' drive for more local housing authorities arises from the fact that there are only 50 established housing agencies in the country at present which can participate under the terms now being drafted. Hundreds are needed, if the act is to function on a large scale.

For this reason, four Governors—of Colorado, Idaho, Minnesota, and Wisconsin—have written Ickes asking if they would need to call special sessions in order to pass enabling legislation. The Secretary's answer will be made public today or tomorrow.

Scores of other inquiries have come from housing groups throughout the Nation, in cities ranging from Leadville, Colo., to Danville, Va. Nearly all places need to set up a housing authority patterned along the new outlines.

Kern, Once Protege of Wilson, Sworn as Tax Appeals Judge

John W. Kern, who resigned as Mayor of Indianapolis a few days ago, yesterday was sworn in as a member of the Board of Tax Appeals, succeeding Justin Miller. The oath was administered by Robert C. Tracy, board secretary.

Mayor of Indianapolis, 37, Happy to Leave Municipal Cares for Bench; Father Was Senator From Indiana.

A little boy who supped with the "Great Commoner" and who later had a famous President recite limericks for his benefit, yesterday at 37 was sworn in as a member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals.

The new appointee is John W. Kern, son of the late Senator John W. Kern, who in 1908 teamed with William Jennings Bryan on the Democratic Presidential ticket.

Smiling broadly and leaning heavily on crutches, the new board member revealed he had ust resigned as Mayor of Indianapolis.

Infantile Paralysis Victim.

"I would rather forget my mayoralty experience and the headaches of municipal government," he said laughingly.

Kern stated he was looking forward eagerly to his new duties on the United States board since they called to mind "pleasant experiences" he had as a judge of the superior court.

The former mayor was stricken with infantile paralysis when 8. His father was then campaigning with William Jennings Bryan. Kern's memories of the great orator are still fresh. "One thing I'll never forget is his over-hearty appetite," he said.

In 1911, the elder Kern became United States Senator and the family moved to the Capital. But young John saw little of life on the Hill, needed operations necessitating his removal to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Nevertheless, it was at Johns Hopkins that a fast friendship developed between the stricken youth and the then United States President Woodrow Wilson. And very often bouquets of American Beauty roses arrived at the hospital with the gilded White House card.

Wilson Often Called.

Even in health, Wilson did not forget him.

"He was a frequent caller at my father's home when we returned to Indianapolis," Kern recalled. "And he would spend hours with the younger folk, telling amusing limericks that were the antithesis of the risque."

Kern was graduated from Washington and Lee University in 1920 and from the Harvard School of Law three years later. Before his appointment to the bench as judge of the Superior Court of Marion County in 1931, he was United States commissioner to the Federal court. He was elected mayor of his home town January, 1935. His term did not expire until December 31, 1937.

Though he was born in Indianapolis, Kern's forbears hail from the neighborhood of Roanoke, Va.

They have reservations to return by plane to Reno tonight.

Bank Bandit Gets $1,000.

Georgetown Adds Radio Law Expert

John William Guider, of the District bar, has been appointed to the graduate faculty of Georgetown Law School, it was announced yesterday, to give courses in radio and air law.

Widely known as a communications specialist, Guider, in 1927, brought to the District Court of Appeals the first case appealed from a decision of the old Federal Radio Commission.

Guider is chairman of the American Bar Association's committee on communications. He is also chairman of the executive council of the international committee on radio, American section. A graduate of the United States Military Academy in 1922, he took a law degree at Georgetown University.

were disposed to minimize the importance of the war factor. However, most commodities advanced, wheat gaining 2½ to 2½ cents a bushel in Chicago.

The contrast between rising commodity and falling security prices was taken by many observers as evidence speculators had their eyes chiefly on diplomatic maneuvers of European powers and implications of the Sino-Japanese hostilities.

Farm implement, mail order, steel and other industrial groups recently favored on autumn prospects were hard hit. United States Steel was off more than $7 at $97.25 a share. Chrysler Motors dropped $9, at $97.50. Bethlehem Steel was off $7.25, at $83.25, and Sears-Roebuck $6.25, at $80.62½. Southern Pacific lost more than $5, at $33.62½.

Erstwhile war favorites yielded with the rest of the list, International Nickel losing nearly $5, at $56, and Douglas Aircraft nearly $6, around $44. Down $3 to $6 were Anaconda Copper, Dupont, United States Rubber, New York Central and National Steel.

The slide carried 384 stocks on the big board to new lows for the year.

A check of brokers with foreign connections indicated liquidation from abroad was not unusually heavy, although foreigners have been credited with accumulating large blocks of American stocks in recent years.

The large crops now being harvested had been the basis of much hope for a vigorous resumption of business recovery after Labor Day, following the summer lull.

Most bonds sold lower with stocks. Rail and industrial issues were particularly weak. Attention paid to foreign news was apparent in selling of Italian government and Japanese loans. Italy 7 per cent bonds were off about $40 per $1,000 face value. U. S. Government loans also yielded moderately in face of the announcement of the Treasury's September financing plans, which called attention to a slowly rising trend in short-term money rates.

Brokers listed stiffening money costs as among causes for loss of bullish confidence in speculative circles, although Federal Reserve banks have reduced lending rates for member banks to keep autumn business demand for credit from lifting money costs.

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 7 (AP).—Modern theories of insulation were experimented with by early Americans, possibly before the birth of Christ, the Rev. Raymond W. Murray, just back from an archeological expedition to the frozen North, reported today.

League Adopts Red Raw Goods Charge

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Soviet delegate's accusation that raw materials are being used "by certain states for warlike purposes" was added today to the report of the League of Nations raw materials exports committee, which yesterday condemned heavy expenditures on armaments as the reason for keeping certain nations from obtaining raw materials.

The inference here was that the Soviet delegate was hitting at Germany, Italy and Japan in his declaration. The original report likewise was taken as a thrust at these countries, all of which have complained of needing colonies.

Board of Education Fights Liquor License for Cafe Near 3 Petworth Schools

Civic Societies And Churches Join in Drive

75 Citizens Win Promise of Education Heads to Take Up Cudgels.

Leo J. Rossiter, who wants to dispense liquor in connection with his restaurant establishment at 4132 Georgia avenue, found his license application a matter of major community concern yesterday, when the Board of Education, meeting to launch plans for the opening of school September 20, voted to protest his request.

A militant delegation of 75 Petworth citizens almost completely surrounded the School Board to decry the evil influence liquor dealing at Rossiter's address would have on the children of Roosevelt, Macfarland and Powell schools, and succeeded in obtaining an official School Board protest for presentation before the Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

The delegation, headed by H. O. Craver, chairman of the Petworth Citizens Association committee on education, included spokesmen for school officials in that community, Parent-Teacher groups, three Protestant churches, other civic organizations and property owners.

Fight Hard Fight.

"There isn't a dealer licensed to sell hard liquor in the vicinity of the schools now, and we don't want one," declared Craver.

Albert Levin, representative for Rossiter, told the board that his client was operating a restaurant primarily, and was seeking a liquor license because of the demand of his customers. He said the establishment did not cater to school children.

Upon motion of Gratz E. Dunkum, a member of the school board's committee on liquor licenses, the school trustees voted unanimously to uphold the protest submitted to it by J. J. Crane, acting superintendent.

The board, at its initial session yesterday, devoted most of its time to consideration of applications from Rossiter's and others for liquor licenses. Under a ruling of the A. B. C. Board, the board of Education is asked to express its opinion on the granting of all licenses for dealer concerns around school buildings.

Dealt With Effect.

Until recently the board has based its opinion on the proximity of the proposed liquor shops to school buildings, a distance of 400 feet being set as a minimum. But yesterday board members based their conclusions on the effect such establishments would have on children attending schools in the vicinity. In most cases the board upheld the recommendations of Superintendent Frank W. Ballou and other officials.

Protests were voiced against issuance of licenses to John A. Waters at 1027 U street northwest, and John J. Simpson at 2133 G street northwest, as well as Rossiter.

School officials also recommended that protest be made against issuing licenses to Leo Colodny and Alexander Falchuk at 2401 Benning road northeast, and to Ernest Charles Blumberg at 341 Fifteenth street southeast, but the board postponed action until a meeting next week.

The board voted to enter no protest against issuance of liquor license to the Footlight Club, Inc., 1849 Seventh street northwest. The night club would operate at a time when nearby schools were not in session, Dr. Ballou informed the board.

Coast Guard Searches Lake for Three Airmen

Point Pelee, Ontario, Sept. 7 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen, assisted by an airplane, continued to search Lake Erie today for the red plane which was seen plunging into the water yesteday, believed to have carried three Detroit men to their deaths.

Don Heursey, manager of the airport where the three took off, identified clothing and equipment found floating in the lake as belonging to the missing men.

Coast Guardsmen said wreckage first sighted in about 15 feet of water turned out to be the remains of a boat.

Boy Burned in Explosion Caused by Dog's Spark

Assistant Fire Chief John Questa said the boy was patting the dog, which was tied to the back of an automobile. The cap on the car's gasoline tank had been removed. There was a flash of flame and an explosion.

Strike on Liner Threatened to Get Pay Raises

C. I. O. Announces Engineers on Manhattan Must Have More Money.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 7.—The National Maritime Union, Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, announced tonight that it would call a strike on the United States liner Manhattan, one of the two largest American ships afloat, before the ship sails at noon tomorrow, unless 12 engineers receive pay increases.

The engineers, members of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, a C. I. O. affiliate, demanded $35 monthly pay increases for junior engineers, and $60 increases for seniors.

Joseph Curran, militant marine union organizer and leader of two previous strikes, sided promptly with the engineers. He announced the N. M. U. also will refuse to sail the ship if the engineers strike.

Simultaneously the Atlantic and Gulf coasts were faced with the threat of a third seamen's strike in two years. The National Maritime Union, affiliated with the C. I. O., threatened to call out the 54,000 members unless labor board elections on 70 steamship company lines were speeded up.

San Francisco, Sept. 7 (AP).—Teamsters worked at top speed today striving to clear the Oakland docks of cargo before the scheduled extension of San Francisco's pier tieup to the East Bay tomorrow.

The teamsters, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, indicated they would ignore the warning of longshoremen and warehousemen, members of John L. Lewis' C. I. O., against extension of the jurisdictional dispute to other ports. Teamsters here stopped work last Wednesday.

Between 200 and 300 teamsters probably will be affected by the union walkout in Oakland.

Rail Strike Authorized.

Cincinnati, Sept. 7 (AP).—George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, announced late today he had authorized a strike of approximately 1,000 freight handlers and other miscellaneous employes of the Southern Railway, and predicted either a strike call or settlement "within 48 hours."

Harrison said he had received a report from G. A. Link, general chairman of a group under jurisdiction of the brotherhood, indicating inability to reach an agreement with the management of the Southern under which the road would apply a recently ordered 5-cent hourly wage increase to freight men.

A. F. L. Expels 4,000.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 7 (AP).—The Connecticut Federation of Labor, backing the recommendation of its executive board, expelled from its ranks today more than 4,000 members affiliated with the C. I. O.

The action was taken at the opening of the federation's four-day convention.

Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, arriving after the delegates had voted 121 to 23 to suspend ten Connecticut unions affiliated with the C. I. O., inquired of Thomas J. Shea, president, what action had been taken. When informed the Governor turned toward the delegates and said, "I want to congratulate you on what you have just done."

Riot Blamed on C. I. O.

Canton, Ohio, Sept. 7 (AP).—Maj. H. O. Curley, former army officer in charge of special police at the July 11 strike riot in Massillon, testified today that the firing of five shots from C. I. O. headquarters was the signal for the clash near the Republic Steel Alloy plant gate which cost two lives.

Chicago Wide Open Prosecutor Claims

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP).—State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney served a "second notice" on Mayor Edward J. Kelly today that "wide-open gambling was rampant in all parts of Chicago."

And it was up to the mayor, the prosecutor suggested, to do something about it.

Police Commissioner James P. Allman immediately ordered all commanding officers to "clean up" their districts. He said 40 or 50 arrests had been made daily, but the State's attorney's representatives had been unable to convict the defendants in court.

Wallace Sees Larger Income For Cotton Belt

Adjustment Payments, Soil Benefits to Increase Revenue, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace predicted yesterday that the Government's cotton loan and payment program—criticized by some Southern leaders—will result in a larger income for the Cotton Belt this year than last.

The Administration's farm chief said a good season was indicated, despite lower market prices, by the increased production, the $130,000,000 provided by Congress for adjustment payments, and the South's share of the soil conservation benefit checks.

He refused to enter a controversy with Southerners who contend the loan rate should be 10 cents a pound instead of 9 cents, and that adjustment payments should be made on the entire crop, instead of the 65 per cent announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

"With increasing world production of cotton," Wallace said, "we face a complicated and long-time problem."

The 9-cent rate, he said, was urged by "thinking cotton people who have the long-time good of the South at heart."

He said the chief value of any government commodity loan is that it furnishes a "temporary rock bottom for domestic prices and prevents a speculative raid on the market."

He does not believe, he said, that a government loan can keep prices in this country high in relation to world cotton prices "for a great length of time."

Some cotton belt leaders have suggested growers hold this year's crop from market under the 9-cent loan until prices advance. Wallace said Administration leaders were not offering advice along this line.

Mystery Man Held For Trial on Old Robbery Charge

Elizabethtown, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—Dapper, enigmatic John Montague, Hollywood golf wizzard and playmate of movie stars, was held today for trial the week of October 11 after he had pleaded not guilty to a seven-year-old robbery charge.

Roger Norton, 35-year-old Cleveland, Ohio, truckman, who served a two-year prison term for participation in the crime of which Montague is accused, waited in the Essex County Jail for an opportunity to identify Montague as his accomplice.

Montague explosively denied he knew Norton, when reporters told him the truckman was waiting to confront him "and tell the whole story."

China Frees Swiss Pair Jailed as Red Plotters

Shanghai, Sept. 7 (AP).—Paul Noulens and his wife, a Swiss couple serving life terms as Communist plotters, have been released, dispatches from Nanking said today.

The couple, originally sentenced to die, won notoriety several years ago when they went on a hunger strike and had to be removed from prison to a hospital. Mme. Sun Yat-sen, widow of the hero of the Chinese revolution, headed the defense committee on their behalf. H. G. Wells, Romaine Rolland and other notables came to their aid.

World Trade Tribunal Plan Wins Essay Contest for Youth

High School Boy, First in Contest, Blames Wars on Commerce.

A world court with plenary authority in "all matters pertaining to commerce" is suggested as the way to permanent peace by James Levergood, Union, N. J., high school student who won the second annual peace essay contest sponsored by the Americanism department of the ladies' auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Levergood was in Washington yesterday on his "prize trip" to the Nation's Capital. His prize also included a trip to Buffalo, where the auxiliary has just completed its annual convention; $100 in cash, and a gold medal. Approximately 150,000 high school students entered the contest.

Levergood said he recommended the world commercial court because econonmic problems provide a common basis for agreement, as they are one of the major causes of unrest and warring attitudes. "If this factor can be run on a basis which will be satisfactory to all concerned," he said, "the other causes of war will collapse around it."

Gas Rate Hearings Open Here Today

A public hearing on gas rate reductions is scheduled to open before the Public Utilities Commission at 10 o'clock this morning, but unofficial reports are that there may not be any rate cut.

Tabulations by accountants of the commission and the Washington Gas Light Co. show only a slight profit in excess of the 6½ per cent allowed the company under the sliding scale adopted last year.

If the excess profit does not amount to more than a few thousand dollars, it is unlikely that any rate reduction will be ordered. Under the sliding scale agreement, only half of the excess profit between 6½ and 7½ per cent may be applied to rate cuts each year.

Quezon Insists Women Pay Taxes if They Vote

Manila, Sept. 7 (AP).—Commonwealth President Manuel Quezon threatened today to veto any woman suffrage law not requiring women to pay a head tax.

The announcement, which brought bitter retorts from women's organizations and split wide open the special session of the Commonwealth Assembly, seemingly confused a question settled by a plebiscite last April.

Japan Crushes China's Defense In Foreign Area

Railway, and claimed successes on other fronts.

Serious uprisings have broken out in the Japanese-controlled State of Manchukuo, which has a Chinese population of nearly 30,000,000, according to Chinese military dispatches from Kweihua today.

Japanese admitted that "disturbances" have occurred and that there is a censorship in the Manchukuoan capital—Hsinking.

Course of War Unchanged.

They said developments in the former Manchurian province and in Jehol, seized from China by the Japanese army in 1931-33, will have no effect on the general course of the spreading Chinese-Japanese war.

The Chinese, on the other hand, asserted that whole regiments of the Japanese-trained Manchukuoan army have been in revolt since late August, when rebellious troops assasinated their Japanese commander, Maj. Gen. Shigeo Fujii.

Foreign military attaches believed the reports might be correct but that the Japanese army in Manchukuo would be able rapidly to regain control of rebellious areas.

It was pointed out that the movements of foreign newspaper correspondents and other observers in Manchukuo long have been so restricted that impartial reports of conditions in the country are almost impossible to obtain.

Reinforcements Asked.

Chinese military dispatches asserted that the situation in Manchukuo now is so serious that the commander of the Japanese army there has been forced to send an urgent appeal to Tokyo for immediate reinforcements.

The reports from the north, including announcement that Japanese columns along the Peiping-Suiyuan railway northwest of Peiping have invaded Shansi Province, where fighting is taking place, threatened to eclipse developments on the Shanghai front.

Other developments of the last 24 hours included:

1. In Tokyo Parliament was completing approval of the emergency China war budget of approximately $580,000,000 after adopting the government's drastic economic program making Japan virtually a totalitarian state—a final decision was expected shortly on whether Japan shall go ahead with plans for the 1940 Olympic games scheduled to be held in the Japanese capital.

2. At Seoul, capital of Japanese-owned Korea, it was reported that Soviet Russian authorities have seized 28 Japanese fishing boats off Russian Kamchatka and that vessels believed to be Soviet submarines have been sighted within striking distance of the coast of Japan proper.

3. In Shanghai the American Chamber of Commerce demanded clarification of President Roosevelt's Block Island statement which was interpreted to mean that the United States Government will abandon all protection of American citizens and property in China.

4. In Nanking the Chinese foreign office in effect formally rejected the demands of the United States, Britain and France that Chinese troops and Japanese warships be withdrawn from immediate vicinity of the Anglo-American and French areas in Shanghai where their interchange of gunfire is killing hundreds of Chinese noncombatants and endangering thousands of Americans and other foreigners.

5. The Japanese naval blockade of the entire Chinese coast against Chinese shipping was intensified and Japanese warships continued activities around the rich British crown colony of Honkong. The British-dominated Chinese maritime customs service anounced that Japanese aircraft had bombed and machine-gunned two more customs cruisers at the port of Ningpo, south of Shanghai, wounding six Chinese sailors and drowning one. British commanders of the vessels narrowly escaped.

Strategic Island Seized.

The Japanese navy dealt a severe blow to Chinese trading activities when they seized strategic Pratas Island, in the China Sea, according to a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic Society. The island a base of Chinese customs, is literally in the way of Chinese coastal shipping.

"Besides its commercial importance to China's home waters, Pratas also lies in a strategic position in regard to international trade. It is about 275 miles off Hongkong and almost on an airline from the British colony to Manila, the Philippine capital," the bulletin says.

[Reliable British sources reported today from Hongkong that Japanese destroyers had seized nearby Pratt Shoals and Lintin Island, on the western fringe of the waters surrounding this British naval stronghold.

[The British sources said the islands were being converted into seaplane bases and great quantities of gasoline and other war supplies were being landed. The Japanese destroyers also left a garrison of marines at Pratt Shoals. Anti-aircraft guns were emplaced and machine gun nests hurriedly built.—Editor's note.]

More Marines Sail.

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Two hundred Marine replacements were ordered today to sail for Asiatic stations.

The contingents will leave at 8 p. m., on the transport Henderson. They will replace men transferred from detachments on duty in China, the Philippines and Hawaii.

It was pointed out that the Marines sailing tonight are not reinforcements. Originally assigned to Chinese stations, they were left behind a week ago when the transport Chaumont sailed for Shanghai with 1,200 troops.

Chinese Sailors in U. S.

Norfolk, Sept. 7 (AP).—Seventy-seven Chinese sailors—under guard and bond—will arrive here tomorrow by train from San Francisco to serve as crews aboard three reconditioned Shipping Board freighters scheduled to sail in several weeks with supplies for the Chinese army.

The sailors, after being admitted to the United States at San Francisco, were each placed under $500 bond furnished by the Southern Pacific Railway, in charge of the transfer to Norfolk. Eight guards of the railway are accompanying the men.

Business Leaders in Orient Say U. S. Prestige Is Ebbing

President's Block Island Statement Arouses Almost Furious Resentment of Many Americans in Shanghai.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Sept. 8.—American business leaders said today that United States prestige in the Orient has reached the lowest point in a century.

President Roosevelt's Block Island statement to the effect that Americans remain in China at their own risk aroused almost furious resentment among scores of businessmen who argued that they have devoted their lives to building up American trade in this country, have their homes here, and always have considered the foreign policy of Theodore Roosevelt—that Americans anywhere will be protected—a keystone on which their fortunes rested.

Protest Registered.

Indicative of American business feeling was this telegram sent by Mark L. Moody, formerly of Lansing, Mich., who has spent 20 years developing United States trade in China:

"Tell President Franklin D. Roosevelt to get off his yacht, get his feet on the ground and some guts above them, get a foreign policy, adopt a strong front, and keep the flag waving if America wants foreign trade. Shanghai Americans are not quitters."

Moody's telegram was sent to the heads of Packard, Chrysler, De Soto, Reo and other automobile manufacturers for which he is the distributor here.

Chairman W. H. Plant called directors of the American Chamber of Commerce into session to study reports of Washington's changed attitude.

Fear Workers Will Flee.

Plant, who represents United States steel exporting companies here, said that previously the chamber had been given to understand that the United States Government's policy was to afford all possible protection to Americans who were required to remain here to attend to essential American businesses.

Fred J. Twogood, general manager for the Socony Vacuum Oil Co., said:

"We have received nothing from Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, in Nanking, that would indicate any changes in the Government's policy of protecting Americans who are needed to keep essential American businesses operating here."

Heads of American firms feared their American employes would flee Shanghai, resulting in virtual abandonment of American business to the Japanese and Chinese.

terests between national socialist Germany and Fascist Italy has in recent months shown itself more and more an element in defense of Europe against chaotic imbecility," Hitler said.

"Our (anti-Communist) agreement with Japan serves the same fundamental mission—to stand together in defense of world civilization." He referred to the Chinese-Japanese and Spanish conflicts as arising out of "further attempts to spread communism . . ."

Hitler Awards "Nobel" Prizes.

Hitler said that despite food difficulties, the National Socialist regime had accomplishel: 1. The Versailles treaty is dead. 2. Germany is free. 3. Our military power guarantees our freedom."

Hitler tonight awarded the first German national prizes, substitutes for the Nobel prizes, which were outlawed by the Nazis last year, at a cultural session of the congress.

One of the 100,000-mark ($40,000) prizes went to Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, the official philosopher of National Socialism and the creator of Teuton neo-paganism, which worships the old German Aryan gods.

The second 100,000 marks were divided between Prof. August Bier, pioneer of new surgery methods, and Prof. Ferdinand Sauerbruch, noted for his achievements in lung surgery.

New Warning Asks Nationals To Leave China

2 Consulates Are Ordered Closed; to Evacuate Service Families.

The first order was aimed chiefly at Army personnel stationed in the Philippine Islands. It is customary for many of the officers and men of the Thirty-first Infantry, stationed near Manila, to visit China while on leave. The Fifteenth Infantry is on duty at Tientsin, China, and officers and men frequently are exchanged between the two infantry regiments.

These actions of the State, Navy and War Departments were taken as evidence that the American authorities have concluded that the Sino-Japanese conflict will be a prolonged affair and that it is wise to get all noncombatants, if possible, out of the troubled areas. It does not necessarily mean that these steps are preparatory to a withdrawal of American armed forces from China, official spokesmen here asserted.

Protest Renewed.

Ever since early August it has been the policy of the American Government to persuade Americans in China to leave that country or, at least, get themselves out of the line of fire. The instructions issued to the consuls at Foochow and Amoy, however, were more specific and firm than orders previously issued. But that was because Japanese aviators have been active over the districts of the two consuls, it was said.

The State Department revealed receipt of a cable from the American Chamber of Commerce in Shanghai which read:

"American Chamber of Commerce Shanghai strongly deprecates any official statement which could be interpreted here as indicating withdrawal or abandonment of American business interests in China. American interests seriously injured thereby."

Cables from Shanghai explained that President Roosevelt's informal statement to a press conference which urged Americans to leave China inspired the chamber's telegram to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, along with the Yarnell decision to evacuate the families of Naval and Marine personnel.

Comment Declined.

Secretary Hull declined to comment on the Shanghai protest, asserting that there had been no change in American policy. Other officials pointed out that the resentment of Americans in Shanghai, as evidenced by this cable and news dispatches from the Chinese port, indicated a misunderstanding of what President Roosevelt had said. Indeed, there was some confusion on that score in official circles here.

State Department attaches said they knew of no "official statement which could be interpreted as indicating withdrawal or abandonment of American business interests in China." They contended that this Government has urged Americans, who can do so, to leave China, but they pointed to the presence of 1,200 Marines in Shanghai, another regiment of 1,200 Marines en route to Shanghai, and the Fifteenth Infantry at Tientsin as evidence of the safeguards being provided Americans who remain in China. The only purpose of these military forces in China is to protect American lives and property.

In addition, it was pointed out, both Japan and China have been warned by this Government that they will be held strictly accountable for any injuries or damage to American lives or property as a result of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Thus, it was explained, the United States is not abandoning any of its rights or interests in China. But on the other hand, it also was pointed out, the facilities which this government has to provide protection are limited by circumstances and therefore it behooves Americans in China to keep out of danger spots.

No Deadine Set.

It was not clear here just what the President exactly said in the Sunday press conference aboard his Yacht Potomac, while anchored off Block Island, in Long Island Sound. Due to the rules against quotation governing such conferences his exact words were not reproduced. Most of the accounts, however, were to the effect that the President had warned that Americans who decline to leave China would remain there at their own risk.

But he also said that no date had been set as the deadline for the evacuation of Americans, as many were experiencing difficulties in China. He also said that the United States would pursue the same policy as it did in regard to its nationals in Ethiopia at the time of the Italian invasion and during the Spanish civil war.

In neither of these incidents did the United States abandon its citizens. It appears that too much emphasis was given to the words "at their own risk." It appears that there was given to those words the significance and connotation which were given to identical words when used by the President in a statement explaining invocation of the neutrality act against the Italo-Ethiopian conflict in October, 1935.

Never Discovered.

On that occasion, Mr. Roosevelt said that in the specific circumstances of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. "I desire it to be understood that any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk."

Japanese Want To Take Hawaii, Wang Declares

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 7.—Chengting T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, today characterized Japanese forces attacking China as "marauders" and intimated China would attempt not only to defeat them but to regain her conquered Eastern provinces, including Manchukuo.

"China's whole position at present," asserted Ambassador Wang, "is that of a householder whose home is attacked by marauders.

"Although Manchuria and the other Eastern provinces were stolen from us six years ago, we still regard them as part of our house."

The Ambassador issued a formal appeal for funds for the relief of Chinese civilians wounded and made destitute by the war.

The Ambassador asserted, as he has on previous occasions, that China stood ready to attempt the settlement of her difficulties with Japan through any pacific means possible, but that she would fight to the utmost to block any further conquest of her territory.

"However," the Ambassador said, "we know that this attempted conquest of China is only a small part of what the Japan militarists envision. They mean to create a Pacific empire which will include not only China but all the lands of the Pacific. That takes in the Philippines, Australia, and Hawaii—if she can get it."

Points to Tokyo Bombing.

Dr. Tsune-chi Yu, Chinese consul-general in New York, who participated in the Ambassador's press conference in the Hotel Ambassador, where Dr. Wang spent the weekend, assisted the Ambassador in an explanation, at one point, that the Chinese bore no ill-will toward the civilian Japanese population.

Said Dr. Yu: "The Japanese army is running amok; it is out of the control of the Japanese government."

Concerning rumors in the Far East that China might dispatch a number of bombing planes in a retaliatory military expedition against Tokyo, Ambassador Wang said: "I believe if there is such a bombing expedition at all it would be directed against military positions."

Franco Deploys Aragon Army To Retake Belchite, Vital City

Air Squadrons Join Counter-Attack as Loyalists Press on 12 Miles and Menace Rebel Line to Teruel.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 7.—Gen. Francisco Franco started out today to encircle the strategically vital city of Belchite, which his rebels lost to the government after terrific fighting on the Aragon front.

The rebels sent several squadrons of bombing and scouting planes to this sector of northeast Spain for the counter-offensive. Franco believed he had enough infantry around Zaragoza to hold off the loyalists.

The government reported its army had advanced 12 miles beyond Belchite in its campaign to sever insurgent communications between Zaragoza and Teruel.

The insurgent army advancing through Asturias Province in northwest Spain, reported the capture of Prieto, a village between Llanes and Gijon, was imminent.

Two Vessels Beached.

Algiers, Sept. 7 (AP).—Two Spanish government freighters were beached on the north coast of Algeria today rather than be shelled and sunk by the insurgent heavy cruiser Canarias. The ships were en route from Algiers to Valencia.

U. S. Assailed By Roosevelts For China Stand

Quentin and His Mother Attack President's Non-Protection Policy.

By the Associated Press.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 7.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., arriving today from Shanghai with her son Quentin criticized President Roosevelt for his newly expressed policy in the Orient and said "all the protection we had (down the Whangpoo River) was an American flag stretched in front of the smoke stack."

Mrs. Roosevelt dictated her statement while sitting on a suitcase in her stateroom aboard the President Jefferson. It was typed by Quentin, a portable machine on his knees.

"There were 410 Americans—the great majority women and children—that went down the Whangpoo River to meet the President Jefferson. We were jammed in the tiny cabin so that it was literally impossible to move. As we left the customs jetty, we heard a sharp burst of antiaircraft firing. All the way down the river, only 12 miles, we heard more firing—sometimes shells; sometimes snipers' bullets.

"All the protection we had was an American flag stretched in front of the smoestack.

"And if our ships are not used to guard us, why are they kept at anchorage in the Whangpoo River where bombs and shells are falling like hailstones?

"Only yesterday the President issued a statement to the effect that any Americans staying in China from now on did so at the riown risk.

"Neither we nor the other American refugees were staying in China. We wer coming out when told to do so, and yet we were allowed to go at our own risk—12 miles down the Whangpoo River under fire, while our ships stayed at anchor, their guns covered—in the height of the firing.

"None of it makes any sense."

Adventists Bow To U. S. Orders To Quit Orient

Church Has No Protest at Roosevelt Edict on Remaining.

Although Seventh Day Adventists have had to shut down their mission work in Shanghai, have lost 15 of their native workers, who were killed, and stand to lose Shanghai property valued at more than $250,000, they have no protest to make against the President's warning that Americans remaining in the Chinese war area do so at their own risk.

The Rev. John McElhaney, president of the world conference of the church, said last night that their evacuation of mission forces from Shanghai fell in the same category as their withdrawal of workers from Spain after the outbreak of civil war there.

"We have always stood on the principle that when the presence of any of our workers seems to create a serious situation, they are to take the advice of American consular officials in that area," he said.

75 Workers Moved.

Dr. McElhaney expressed belief that none of his church's workers was included among the Shanghai "missionaries and business men" who yesterday expressed resentment of what they termed the Government's "withdrawal of American protection."

Seventh Day Adventist property evacuated within recent days and yesterday seized by the Japanese includes two hospitals, two schools, a large three-story office building, and 12 two-story homes.

Approximately 75 medical and mission workers were moved from these buildings to Hongkong and Manilla. Fifteen Chinese mission workers of the church were killed after they had been moved to the International Settlement, Dr. McElhaney said.

All Buildings Damaged.

All buildings have suffered damages from cross firing, according to information reaching conference headquarters here from Fred Griggs, of Washington, who was in charge of the mission in the Yangtzepoo district north and slightly east of Shanghai.

Griggs and three other Seventh Day Adventist leaders are remaining in Shanghai for the time being "to look out for the property as best they can." The others are C. C. Morris, treasurer of the conference's Chinese division; a Dr. Hale, compound physician and former professor of the conference medical school in Los Angeles, and A. L. Longway, secretary of the mission's publishing division.

Dr. McElhaney said the church had "been hoping things would settle dwon" and the 75 workers could return to their posts. If no break comes within the near future, he said, they may be assigned to other posts or returned to the United States.

Shanghai was headquarters of the conference's work in China, although its hildings are scattered over the entire country and include 12 medical institutions, Mr. McElhaney said. Work is continuing at all other points, he said.

Crisis Forced On Europe by Fascist Union

council table. The way was smoothed further for Italian participation by an assurance from the British foreign office that Russia will not be allowed to transform the Friday talks into a "trial with Italy in the dock," reported by the London Daily Mail. Britain, the newspaper declared, is understood to have given assurances that no political questions would be raised.

[The final decision as to whether Italy—and perhaps Germany—will attend the conference was understood last night to have been carried directly to the two friendly dictators, Premier Benito Mussolini and Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, according to the United Press.—Editor's note.]

Determination of the Reich and Italy not to seat their representatives at any council table with Spanish loyalists when insurgents were uninvited, and reports of Japanese attacks on British shipping in the Orient, further complicated the tangled diplomatic situation and drew Fascist and Communist powers more closely into armed camps.

Germany, Japan and Italy form a strong Fascist line-up, with Russia on the other side and Britain and France trying desperately to keep out of either camp, hoping the United States will be with them in case of a test of strength.

Conference Friday.

England last week sent warships to hunt down the pirate submarines, but took more practical steps in organizing a Mediterranean conference for next Friday at Nyon, Switzerland. There was a hint there would be talk of recognizing Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

Whatever the result, three angry powers, Russia, Germany and Italy are the three most heavily armed, with armies that average a million each and several times that in well-trained reserves.

Meanwhile the other "Fascist" power, Japan, is in an undeclared war with China. There also is the same desire for expansion by a government whose people are crowded and lack raw materials.

Back of all this is the universal unrest evident in political, financial, labor and intellectual turmoil.

There are three phases to the brewing conflict:

3—Religious differences.

There also are a dozen angles that complicate an already obscure situation. Briefly, however, the lines of the world cleavage developed from the great war.

Old Germany Gone.

Beaten Germany lost her colonies. The Austro-Hungarian empire the Kaiser controlled was split into little states to weaken the power of the old German group.

Hitler, by his defiant daring and shrewd judgment, destroyed the Versailles Peace Treaty, nullifying one by one clauses that gave Germans a feeling of humiliation.

Germany emerges now as a heavily armed power, building a navy and boldly conscious of her strength.

Italy, after the war, demanded the "satisfaction" in Africa which France and England promised her in a secret London treaty of 1915. France and England admitted Italy failed to get her "satisfaction" for joining the allies but they offered far less than Mussolini would take.

Mussolini then exercised his might in Ethiopia. At the time a series of treaties gave England, France and Italy "rights" and "zones of influence" there. Some day the three presumably would have had to split the "spoils," which might only have been economic, meaning raw materials and trading markets.

The Ethiopian Victory.

Mussolini was forehanded. He went into Ethiopia alone. England tried to stop him by organizing 52 nations against Italy in a League of Nations boycott that failed. Germany aided Italy and the Fascist group was formed.

Then came the Spanish civil war, July 18, 1936.

Germany and Italy aided Gen. Francisco Franco in his Fascist insurgency. Soviet Russia helped the Madrid-Valencia Socialist government. Spain became the vortex into which other nations might be drawn.

England and France organized 27 nations in a nonintervention plan to patrol Spain, shut off outside aid and let the Spaniards fight it out.

That broke down when Spanish government planes bombed the German pocket battleship Deutschland on May 29 and the Germans replied by a thorough-going shelling of Almeria two days later.

Aside from the six-main powers involved and the United States, whose neutrality policy and interests may conflict, there are little nations whose lives are at stake.

Germany demands her colonies. England, France and others have them under mandate.

Germany wants control of Germans wherever they are. Three millions are in a strip of Czechoslovakia and German is the language of Austria, still called the "keystone in the arch of peace" and the "powder keg of Europe."

Portugal is a Fascist state, bordering the insurgent half of Spain and close to the seat of trouble.

Poland once was France's ally but leans now toward Germany, hates Russia and fears a Russian-German conflict would make her a battlefield unless she joins Germany and divides the spoils—if there is to be a war. Another thorn is the Polish Corridor which divides Germany into two parts, an abnormal situation which few statesmen expect Germany to tolerate indefinitely.

Belgium Tries to Keep Out.

Belgium once was a battlefield and is trying to keep out of any future world war by refusing to join proposed British and French military alliances.

Holland is anxious, too, because she adjoins Germany and because Japan has taken much of her trade.

Hungary wants back lost territory and the security of armaments.

Rumania still disputes with Russia the Bessarabian fields which she got in the World War peace settlement.

Yugoslavia with Rumania and Czechoslovakia form the little entente, friendly to France but conscious it must fight its own battle to retain territory and keep free of either German or Italian domination.

France and Great Britain have their empire troubles. France doesn't want Italy to rule the Mediterranean because Moroccan troops must come by ship to France for any "next" war. Britain has grief in the troublous Palestine mandate, in an India seeking independence and in China where her interests are large and her ambassador was machine-gunned from the air by a warplane she asserts was Japanese.

The United States alone, so far, has kept fairly free of troubles that directly involve her in a possible war, but much of the rest of the world wants her in because here are oil, cotton, food, iron and nearly everything to build ships and planes, clothe soldiers and load guns.

Kidnaper Widely Hunted.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—As the search for the "calm-voiced" kidnaper of two Johnson City policemen widened today to nine States, New York State police warned motorists against picking up any "strange" hitch-hikers.

Heads Uncle Sam's 'Police Force'

Elmer Clint Duncan (above), captain of the Department of the Interior guards, yesterday was made inspector of all the guards who protect Government buildings. The service, operated by the National Park Service, employs 800 men and is used in 125 buildings here.

Duncan Named New Chief of Building Guard

New chief of the Government's "police" is Elmer Clint Duncan, 48-year-old World War veteran, who yesterday was appointed inspector of all the guards who watch over Washington's Federal buildings.

Duncan, who has been in the guard service 15 years, will have charge of disciplining the service's 800 men and investigating any disturbance which may arise in 125 buildings. In addition, he will share with the fire marshal the responsibility for the guards' training school, operated by the National Park Service.

According to the Department of the Interior, which announced the appointment, Duncan's job resembles that of a police inspector. The guards themselves are supervised by captains assigned to the various groups of buildings, and Duncan supervises the captains. He succeeds the late William Wright.

Not under his authority are the Capitol, the Treasury, the Government Printing Office, Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Supreme Court, which maintain their own guards.

A legal resident of Tennessee, Inspector Duncan had two years of service during the World War with the 119th Infantry of the Thirtieth Division, United States Army. He was discharged with the rank of corporal.

He joined the Interior Department's guard service in 1922 and was promoted successively to sergeant and lieutenant. For the past two years he has been captain of the Interior guards. The entire service is operated by the buildings management branch of the National Park Service.

He will supervise editorially the Oklahoma News, Oklahoma City, Rocky Mountain News, Denver; Houston Press, El Paso Herald-Post, Fort Worth Press, and Albuquerque Tribune. Ralph Burkholder, Cleveland Press chief editorial writer, succeeds Morrow at Akron.

D. C. Residents Urged to Join Regatta Fete

Chairman Wants Homes and Stores Decorated for Big Event.

James A. Councilor, general chairman of the President's Cup Regatta Committee, yesterday called all hands on deck for a noonday mess in the fo'csle of the Harrington Hotel and urged his mates "to climb aboard for Washington's biggest week."

The regatta committee wants all District residents to take part in the plans and be on hand for the pageant September 23. At this time, with the aid of the greatest fireworks display ever booked in Washington, will be unfolded the re-enactment of the historic battle between the Bon Homme Richard and the Serapis.

"This event is for all residents of the United States," said Councilor, "and we call on all Washingtonians to do their share in the decoration of their homes and business places."

Various committee heads reported "clear sailing ahead."

Harry Smith, assistant to the chairman of the races, informed his mates the "cream of the crop" of boat racers already have signified their intention of participating.

Tickets will be placed on sale this week.

Lieut. Comdr. M. O'Neil, of the Coast Guard, was appointed "Admiral of the Queen's Fleet," which will escort Miss Mary Louise Colbert, Queen of the Regatta.

Jones Drops Trip, Talk of a Special Session Is Revived

By the Associated Press.

Talk of a special session of Congress revived yesterday when it became known that Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, has abandoned plans to accompany a Congressional delegation to Hawaii.

The Texan will return to Washington the middle of October to start drafting farm-price stabilization legislation.

Shortly after the last session adjourned the chairman announced he would return to the Capital a month ahead of the next session, whether it might be special or the regular one in January.

Concert Singer's Wife Sues Him for Support

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Charging abandonment and failure to support her and their daughter adequately, Mrs. Caroline S. Marshall filed suit for separation today from Everett Robert Marshall, concert singer, now appearing at Fort Worth, Tex., in a Billy Rose "fiesta."

Supreme Court Justice Louis A. Valente appointed Mrs. Marshall receiver of Marshall's property in New York York State and authorized her to move into his Riverside Drive apartment from a single hotel room, where she said she had been staying.

Governors at Parley Asked to White House

By the Associated Press.

The White House said yesterday that President Roosevelt had invited Governors who will attend the annual Governors' Conference in Atlantic City to lunch with him at the White House on September 16.

The invitation, it was explained, was forwarded to the presiding officer of the conference after the Governors of a number of States had asked if they could pay the President a personal visit in Washington after the conference ends.

Control Board 'Corners' Beer In Montgomery

Breweries Ordered to Sell to Liquor Body Only in Future.

All Montgomery County breweries in the future will sell their entire output to the Liquor Control Board, it was decided at the board's meeting in Silver Spring, Md., last night. In the future, retail liquor dealers will buy their supplies from the board.

This action, board members said, was taken to force breweries to cease selling their products to retail dealers at varying prices.

Holders of licenses authorizing liquor sales by corporations were ordered to produce their corporate and stock ownership records, in order that the Liquor Control Board may determine whether all laws and recommendations have been complied with.

For the year ended June 30, the board was told, a net profit of $87,813.17 was realized. Total sales during the year amounted to $413,161.03, an increase of approximately $75,000 over the previous year.

The board also issued a special license for the sale of beer at the Knights of Columbus horse show.

Action on penalties to be levied on two breweries failing to post their prices with the board, as required by law, was suspended, pending further investigation. No decision was reached on the application of the Indian Spring Tavern, at Four Corners, Md., for permission to sell liquor.

Utility Sift Halted By Court Order

Philadelphia, Sept. 7 (U.P.).—The Federal Power Commission was restrained today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals from reopening its investigation of the six Pennsylvania subsidiaries of the Associated Gas & Electric Co.

Judges J. Warren Davis and John Bigg, jr., ordered the commission to postpone hearings scheduled to open in Washington Tuesday and to take no further action in the investigation until the court has decided whether the commission has jurisdiction in the case. A full hearing was scheduled for October 4.

The Federal investigation was started in March after Gov. Earle asserted the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission was unable to obtain detailed information regarding the companies' operating charges and expenses.

Neutrality Act Decree Urged to Prevent War

Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 7 (AP).—Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, said tonight President Roosevelt should put the neutrality act into effect at once to avert the possibility of a war with Japan.

Fish, ranking Republican member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, said "we should withdraw our armed forces . . . and cease being used to pull British chestnuts out of the fire in the Far East."

'Undercrowding' Issue Faced By New School at Greenbelt

The modern, 16-room elementary school will open at the Greenbelt low-cost housing project today faced with a serious problem—undercrowded conditions.

The school is ready for occupancy, complete in every detail, with all the latest conveniences. A staff of 10 teachers, selected with utmost discrimination, will be on hand. Only yesterday Nicholas Orem, Prince Georges County superintendent of schools, signed an agreement whereby the Federal Government will pay to the county the sum of $26,000 to operate the school on a year lease.

Everything is in readiness for the opening day of school—except for the pupils.

Greenbelt or "Tugwelltown," the now defunct Resettlement Administration's utopian experiment, still is unoccupied, although Government officials insist that families will begin to move in by the end of this month, despite the fact that they still are confronted with the task of selecting each tenant from a list of 9,000 applicants.

Until the "model" town becomes the thriving residential community that Resettlement Administration officials envisioned, however, the teaching staff must waste its talents on virtually empty classrooms. School officials estimate that perhaps several score pupils will be admitted today from neighboring communities.

All business services of the community will be in operation when the residents arrive, too. Greenbelt Consumers Services, Inc., the body which will direct them, was chartered yesterday in Baltimore.

The charter, which was filed with the State Tax Commission, gives the company power to operate on a co-operative basis all stores, restaurants, barber shops, filling stations, beauty parlors, theaters and to manufacture, lease property, act as purchasing agent and operate in any State.

Capital stock of the company was set at $50,000, composed of 500 shares of $100 each. Persons living in Greenbelt will be eligible to purchase stock. Profits from all enterprises will be held in trust and passed out among the stockholders.

Directors of the new company were listed as Flint Garrison, Herbert E. Evans, and Percy S. Brown.

Kay Francis at Work For Film Firm She Sued

Hollywood, Sept. 7 (AP).—Kay Francis, who doesn't want to work for the Warner studio any more, went to work today in a new Warner picture—behind guarded doors.

After graduating from the Quartermaster Corps School in 1924, Col. Moore served as quartermaster, New York Port of Embarkation, and retired in 1932.

Fightinig Worthies Slighted On Star List, Many Believe

Some Hold Grant and Pershing Entitled to Place on Honor Roll; Others Claim Bonaparte and Hannibal Rated Too Low by Simpson.

"It's very interesting," officers of the Army agreed, or so they said about Lieut. Col. George L. Simpson's all-time, all-star, world-wide squad of military leaders. That's about all they did agree on. Each had his own opinions and was perfectly willing to select a team of his own.

Choice was not limited to the list proposed, and no holds were barred. One officer suggested that Genghis Khan and Tamerlane, Asiatic leaders, were entitled to some consideration. Another pointed out that Frederick Barbarossa, who made the mistake of getting drowned while on a Crusade, "was a corker of a general."

"And what about Allenby?" a high officer of the American Army demanded. He ran his own show in Palestine and Arabia; bossed communications; shoved around the cavalry to where it was needed; pleaded with the British War Office for more troops, and, best of all, beat the Turks, with an army not familiar with desert fighting. He's entitled to a look-in as one of the great commanders of history."

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. Army, retired, chief of the Chemical Warfare Service during the World War, wanted to know why Hannibal, the man that hopped the Swiss Alps on elephants, couldn't at least have been a division commander.

All of the officers interviewed agreed that Napoleon got the short end of the stick when Col. Simpson made his selection.

"Why 'Bony' commanded empires," one general snorted, "and all he gets in the list is the first division. I suppose Gen. Von Steuben, drillmaster of the American Revolutionary Army, would be billed as a top sergeant if the list went down that far."

Another high officer maintained that Gen. Winfield Scott was not "fussy." He was the general that trained commanders for both the Union and Confederate forces for the Civil War. Both Grant and Lee served under him, it was pointed out.

Lieut. Col. T. J. Camp, War Department press officer, thought that Gen. Ulysses S. Grant had done a pretty good job in taking Vicksburg and commanding the Union Armies during the rest of the War Between the States, and an amateur strategist 'lowed as how it was strange to pick Gen. Sherman for a place in the limelight when his boss, Gen. Grant, was not included.

When it came to choosing an ordnance officer, Napoleon Bonaparte came in for some more praise. Nobody denied that Gustavus Adolphus, Col. Simpson's choice, was excellent, but "after all, Bonaparte, who was originally an ordnance officer, first massed guns in battle."

Baron Mannfred von Richtofen, Germany's ace of aces, who was listed as air officer, winning "the post without a struggle," was considered poor choice. The baron's record, it was pointed out, "didn't require any generalship."

The air force general, it was pointed out, must command thousands of planes, and not one ship.

Several also said Pershing did a first-class job as boss of the A. E. F. in the World War.

Agents Believe Arrest of Trio May Break Up Counterfeit Ring

A family of three—including mother, father and 15-year-old daughter—is being held in Baltimore by Secret Service agents and a second man is being sought on counterfeiting charges

Agents believe that through them they may learn the source of spurious bills and coins that have been flooding the District and nearby Virginia.

Search for them started Monday, when the proprietor of the Bell Inn, Lee Highway, reported to police that they had attempted to change a number of bogus 25-cent pieces in his establishment.

Shortly after their arrest, a garage operator called Baltimore police to say a man had tried to sell him $20 worth of bills for $5. A card he dropped in the garage, police say, bore the license number of the automobile driven by the Pius family.

Havana, Sept. 7 (AP).—The fever of national independence which has been sweeping the world today spread to the little Isle of Pines, 50 miles off the south coast of Cuba.

Representative Marino Lopez Blanco, returning from an airplane trip to the 600-mile square island, reported that the "Pineros" were preparing to make a fight for independence at the Cuban constitutional convention next year.

Parliament Cheers Premier of Belgium Accused by Rexists

Brussels, Sept. 7 (AP).—Cheers greeted Premier Paul van Zeeland today as he defended himself in Parliament against Rexist-Fascist charges he had received unwarranted payments from the National Bank of Belgium, of which he formerly was an officer.

Fighting for his political future, the youthful premier lashed the critics of his official integrity for their "vile campaign" to "ruin the country."

Police and gendarmes guarded all entrances to the Parliament building to forestall any demonstration.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

The Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks present the Tempo Choral Society, under the direction of W. Scott Mayo, at the Sylvan Theater Tuesday night. Guest soloist: Victoria Rice, violinist; Society soloists: Frankie Crowder, Dorothy Brice, Beatrice Marshall, E. E. Ayers and J. O. Holmes, jr.

Attendance at the last summer program of the Sylvan Theater last night was attenuated by a dubious mist that seemed on the point of precipitating in rain, but a fair-sized audience assembled nevertheless to hear the colored singers of the Tempo Choral Society. Before the concert was half over, a clear sky put all uneasiness at rest, and the choristers received an undivided attention.

The program arranged by W. Scott Mayo consisted largely of Negro spirituals in their original form and in versions by Nathaniel Dett, T. Curtis Mayo, Alston Burleigh, Rosamund and Carl Diton. Sung with fervor and earnestness, these religious songs evoked from the audience a responsive applause. They included "Let Us Cheer the Weary Traveler," "There's A Meeting Here Tonight," "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," "Roll, Jordon, Roll," "Steal Away to Jesus," "Fix Me," "No More" and "That Suits Me."

Commendation is due T. Curtis Mayo, of Washington, for his effective arrangements of "The Crucifixion," "Go Down, Moses" and "Done Found My Lost Sheep." The part-writing was clear and well ordered, and the harmonization modern without disturbing the naive quality of the themes. As much cannot be said for Nathaniel Dett's motet, "Chariot Jubilee," based on "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," which is over-elaborate and harmonically sophisticated.

Other items on the program were Henry T. Burleigh's "Mother of Mine," Jerome Kern's "Old Man River," and William Armes Fisher's adaptation of the slow movement from Dvorak's E minor symphony, "Going Home." Contending with a dampness that affected the strings of her violin, the guest soloist, Victoria Rice, gave agreeable performances of two pieces by Fritz Kreisler, Adams' "The Holy City," and the spiritual, "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen."

Ga. County Refuses Chain Gang Help

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 7 (AP).—Gov. E. D. Rivers' first effort to curb chain-gang escapes by holding the guard or warden responsible brought retaliation from Hall County today in the form of a notice to the State to come and get its 31 prisoners.

Hall County advised the State of its decision to close its felon camp a few hours after C. A. Johns, chairman of the State prison commission, had discharged Warden T. E. Warf and Guard H. S. Walker, of the Hall County camp, from which three prisoners escaped Sunday. Johns said the State would transfer the men to a highway camp.

No Deaths Here, But—

A tavern argument which ended in an automobile duel on the highway; a driver squeezed back into line while attempting to pass; a curve taken too fast; a light sedan driven into a heavily loaded truck; three cars smashed when two swerved after nicking left-front fenders; a motorcyclist hit head-on as he weaved through traffic; a monument struck; a stoplight jumped; a collision; a skid, and so forth.

Result: 11 Washingtonians dead and more injured. None of the accidents occurred within the District limits, making the second consecutive year that the city has come through a Labor Day week-end without a fatal or even serious accident. This is a fine feather for the police department's traffic squad and, too, for the few drivers who remained in the city over the holiday.

But throughout the Nation, some 302 deaths were recorded during the three days. Last year 271 was the figure for the same period, though gasoline consumption and other statistics indicate many more cars on the road this year than last.

The particular bitterness for the District lies in the fact that almost all of the accidents involving local residents might easily have been avoided. One glance at the reports on the crashes makes it clear that recklessness lay at the bottom of most of them. No blow-outs, no broken steering rods—just plain carelessness. They courted death, most of them, and in so doing not only risked their own lives but those of many careful drivers and pedestrians. Stricter regulation of reckless and incompetent drivers draws nearer.

Postgraduate Education.

Public health authorities long ago discovered that inoculations against certain diseases are effective only for a limited period. Sooner or later the vaccines and antitoxins introduced into the blood stream lose their potency and re-immunization is called for.

Now Sir Richard Livingstone, president of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, comes forward with the suggestion that this procedure be followed to avert intellectual, no less than physical deterioration. Immunization to the former, he argues, should take the form of supervised re-education.

Sir Richard would make it compulsory, particularly in the case of public and industrial officials. He would have such individuals sent back to school periodically, and on full pay, to help them keep abreast of the times. And there is substance in the suggestion. The body of knowledge, the outlook on life, the philosophy which men in key positions acquired a generation ago, are by no means automatically adaptable to the needs of a rapidly changing world.

Such benefactions as the Littauer foundation, designed to improve public administration, are already working along these lines. All the learned professions through regular convocations endeavor to keep up with the latest discoveries in their respective fields. And the spread of adult education, most notably in this country and Great Britain, shows that there is a growing awareness, both by educators and the public generally, of the need of a curriculum beyond the formal period of schooling.

There is no such thing as too much education. When that process ends life as a dynamic and constructive force ends too and atrophy begins. Very likely the re-education of our public officials, of our industrial leaders and of other groups would pay dividends far in excess of the costs. And all so benefited would probably welcome the opportunity to spend a term on a college campus, finding there time for that contemplation, reflection and reasoned adaptation which are all but impossible in the hurry and frenzy of modern life.

Puffs Without Pain.

The cream puff, inadequately defined by the dictionary as "a kind of cake," has long been considered a harmless, if somewhat effete, delicacy. Popular on picnics, its creamy center has found a last resting place in many a sweet tooth. One or two eggs, a dash of sugar, milk to thin, flour to thicken, and presto—a puff. But, alas, even this saga of sweetness has its sour note. This the Baltimore Health Department emphasized when it recently issued precautionary measures to prevent "cream puff illness."

The union of cream and puff is ordinarily a simple matter. A hole is cut in the puff shell and the custard squeezed in. This method is beyond criticism in cool weather. But summer heat, at least of the Baltimore variety, may spoil the filling. To prevent this, bakers are advised to employ pasteurization, consisting of "placing the pastry, after it is filled, into an oven of 425 degrees Fahrenheit and keeping it there for at least 20 minutes." Not the least of the chef's worries is to see that such sterilization does not ruin the streamlined contours of his product.

The Baltimore Health Department is to be commended for its effort to stem cream puff casualties. But juvenile consumers must remember that pasteurization is not everything. No matter how perfectly sterilized, the third puff may still be counted on as a subversive agent.

Unfortunate Coincidence.

It was to be expected that Chancellor Hitler, in his address to the annual Nazi congress at Nuremberg, would reiterate the German demand for a colonial empire. It was also to be expected that an adverse report on the economic importance of colonial possessions would be made by the committee of the League of Nations which has been studying the distribution of raw materials.

What was not anticipated was that the address and the report would come simultaneously, at a moment when the danger of another world war is greater than has been the case at any time since Armistice Day, 1918.

The coincidence is unfortunate, not because exception can properly be taken to the economic reasoning in the report of the raw materials committee, but because its publication at this moment is likely to add to the flames of German passion. And, as the tone of Hitler's speech yesterday amply demonstrates, those passions are running high.

It could scarcely be otherwise. Japan's conquest of Manchuria, Italy's seizure of Ethiopia, long since emphasized Germany's failure to regain lost territories. And Germany feels herself the more discriminated against because both Italy and Japan are again on the warpath, the former in Spain, the latter against the central Chinese government. Viewed alone Nazi foreign policy appears decidedly aggressive. But by contrast with that of her two fascist allies it has so far been relatively temperate. Certainly the Germans believe this to be the case.

The Nuremberg conference is essentially an opportunity for the Nazi regime to exploit German grievances. And just as it assembles the League committee points out that "if countries with reduced supplies and foreign exchange employ them for armaments, they naturally have difficulty in obtaining the raw materials required for normal purposes."

The reasoning is impeccable. But it is directed rather too pointedly toward Germany and is unfortunately pharisaical in tone. It is undoubtedly true that colonies would solve none of Germany's urgent economic problems. Nevertheless such advice will not be well received from a committee with British and French representation. Those two nations are too interested in holding their huge colonial areas to be successful in moralizing to Germany on the economic unimportance of empire.

Moreover, the present economic situation in Germany, having steadily deteriorated under the Nazi self-sufficiency program, is too serious to permit the party rulers to admit how largely they are responsible. They must argue, as Hitler did yesterday, that additional territorial resources are essential to reduce the strain on the German people. And probably the Fuehrer is quite sincere in saying this. He does not possess the trained intelligence which is necessary to comprehend the intricacies of economic cause and effect. His simple, and to the ignorant persuasive, argument is that Germany is poor simply because the raw material resources within her present frontiers are very limited.

Psychologically, therefore, the raw materials committee of the League has blundered in lecturing Germany at this moment, regardless of the economic justification of the report. For the Germans, with the apparent success of Japanese and Italian aggression before their eyes, are now in no mood to listen to lectures. And even if they were, nations which keep tight grip on great colonial empires, while telling others they are valueless, would not be the most successful preachers.

The policy of collective action against aggression will have to be developed if aggression is ever to be checked. But collective effort to preserve a status quo not subject to revision will always be regarded as intolerable by those who count themselves as have-nots. In the failure to combine an insistence upon treaty observance with an equal concern for treaty revision is found the source of much of the whirlwind abroad in the world today. There was a time when the cloud from which this storm emanates was no larger than a man's hand. But that is the case no longer.

Complicated Combination.

H. G. Wells, for all his imagination, will now have to look to his laurels. For fact, always stranger than fiction, disclosed two new inventions last week which rival the British author's "Time Machine." One is an aid to nonstop thinking designed by Dr. A. G. Bills, of the University of Cincinnati. The other is an anti-drowning pill which Mr. Paul Pisculli, a Long Island chemist, claims will keep a person afloat.

The brain, says science, takes a short vacation on an average of once or twice a minute. That, according to Dr. Bills, is just once or twice too often and is the result of a shortage of oxygen at the seat of thought. In order to prevent this cerebral slacking, he proposes a sort of air-cooling system for the cranium. The major gadget is a towel-like oxygen mask to be worn over the mouth.

Mr. Pisculli's invention, on the other hand, is not for those who think but those who sink. If the Pisculli pill comes up to its inventor's claims, lifeguards, lifeboats, and lifesavers will soon belong to horse and buggy days. But the trial gulp, which took place last week at Asbury Park, was as disappointing as the tonic of a street fair's medicine man. The inventor's nephew took one of these pills and not long afterward was hauled ashore.

Not even the combined ingenuity of Dr. Bills and Mr. Pisculli could have prevented this outcome. For how can anyone take a pill to keep from drowning if he is wearing a mask over his mouth to make him think about taking a pill to keep from drowning?

Justice Martin Retires.

The retirement of Chief Justice George Ewing Martin from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia is of significance not only to Washington but the Nation as a whole. Next to the Federal Supreme Court, the local court of appeals probably handles a larger variety of Government cases than any other.

For the heavy responsibility of directing its affairs, Justice Martin was admirably equipped, both by education and long experience. His thoroughly sound and always understanding administration of this high office was the admiration of the bar. Retiring now at 80, he takes with him all gratitude and respect. It will be difficult to fill his place.

The new vacancy is the second to occur on the appeal bench within a short time. Justin Miller was recently named to succeed Associate Justice Van Orsdel, who died two months ago. An attorney with the Federal Board of Tax Appeals at the time of his appointment, Mr. Miller was especially recommended by his accomplishments as chairman of the American Bar Association's section on criminal law and, more recently, as a principal participant in the Attorney General's crime conference. His liberalism, his energy and his demeanor were a welcome addition to the court.

One candidate for Justice Martin's place, rushed into nomination by Senator Elmer Thomas, is reported to have similar qualifications. Judge Fletcher Riley of the Oklahoma Supreme Court has had an enviable career. However, he will meet with considerable competition for the post if the two score disappointed nominees for Justice Van Orsdel's place re-enter the lists, as is to be expected.

Judge Riley should be handicapped, too, by the fact that he is not a District lawyer. Other things being equal, the successor of Justice Martin should be a local man. This is urged by more than civic loyalty and dislike of patronage appointments. Other factors being equal, a man personally familiar with District practice and procedure is naturally better qualified for a place on a District bench than is an outsider.

A Belle's Bills.

Boy meets girl. Boy takes girl to dance and dine. Boy pays on an average of $3.23 for the privilege. At least these were the facts and figures, according to an article which appeared recently in the Richmond Times Dispatch.

Fortunately, six economical swains from that city decided this was all pish and tosh and set out to prove it. Now all the sad young men in Richmond are sad no more. For the price of impressing a young lady with one's solvency has there been lowered by $1.73, thanks to the organization of a Friday Night Club.

This club meets once a week and it costs each man only $1.50 a meeting. A girl's only requirements for membership is that she be good looking. So far so good! The daters are saving money and the dated are rushing to get into the ladies' auxiliary.

But wait until the serpent rears his ugly head in this economical Eden and the girls start estimating how much it costs them per date. It's true that men no longer get a shave and a hair cut for two bits. But even then their barbering is nominal compared to what a girl has to spend in preparation for a date. Shampoo, finger wave, manicure! It's a theme song which finds its best accompaniment on the cash register.

Oh well, if everybody's happy why bring up the old plaint that, in the long run, it's the woman who pays.

Sugar Pines Now Secure.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

The Yosemite sugar pines are now safe—most of them. With the money in hand with the passage of the third deficiency bill Secretary Ickes has ordered the National Park Service to proceed at once to close the purchase of 7,200 acres of sugar pine along the western border of the Yosemite Park authorized by Congress last July.

In spite of this authorization, says Secretary Ickes, the Yosemite Sugar Pine Co., owner of most of the land, took advantage of a technical delay in allotting the money for the purchase price to continue cutting. According to the Secretary the company cut 800 of the big trees and slashed out more than a mile of railroad right of way before the operation was stopped by the provision of the money for the purchase.

This action is hard to account for. Fortunately it is now stopped and these sugar pine stands, the finest in existence outside the park, are now safe.

Southerner's Views.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter by "Boardinghouse Keeper" in The Post of September 6 is interesting and, no doubt, is true. But the one thing, which "Boardinghouse Keeper" and The Post cannot see, is that the conditions depicted apply not solely to Southerners. Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing Prison, stated in a book that every migration contributed its ratio of defectives. When the Irish were coming over in large numbers, the prison at Sing Sing received a larger number of lawbreakers from among the Irish than from among others; the Jew, the German, the Italian, etc., were represented in Sing Sing according to representation of each particular group among the total immigration. Boiled down, where there is a casting off of home ties, plus a conflict in cultures, the migrants are apt to go to extremes, in the direction opposite that which they usually followed. And these defectives are but a minority of the migrants.

I am Southern, but I believe that "Boardinghouse Keeper" has written the truth and I am glad that the item appeared. But I think that conclusions should be drawn in the negative, i. e., that the actions of these defectives but represent exactly the opposite from what generally is done in their own localities. I want these defectives to know the contempt with which they are held even by those they patronize.

And I am pleased that the lady from Maryland-Georgia made the protest which she did. It is getting time for someone to protest the marketing of falsities such as "Tobacco Road" and other scavengings in a market prepared by the imitative poets and worse authors of the "Mayflower Gangsters" who, now, happily have been absorbed by more moral groups.

Philatelists' Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reports are being circulated in the philatelic world that the still far-distant New York World's Fair will be advertised by a series of United States postal adhesives—three values, 2, 3 and 5 cents denominations.

And yet the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States of America—an event that overshadows the New York World's Fair like the Sino-Jap war overshadows peace—for which a 20 months' celebration has been arranged, is honored, commemorated, or advertised by one common, super-ordinary, purple 3-cent stamp.

Why the Postoffice Department did not follow the recommendations of the Sesquicentennial Director General, Sol Bloom, for a series of stamps similar to the George Washington bicentennial series is somewhat of a mystery. Or perhaps the New York Republican couldn't bring enough influence to bear on the Democratic chairman, James A. Farley. Or perhaps, the schedule of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing was so crowded with unimportant local issues, and purely revenue-raising issues (such as the Virginia Dare farce, and the S. P. A. souvenir sheet) that the Constitution series, proposed by the Sesquicentennial Commission, was changed to a single 3-cent stamp if the bureau could find time to fill the order.

Reports also say that the Postoffice Department desired a bicolored stamp, but that the mechanical equipment of the bureau was unable to comply with the request—thus the same old purple.

Conclusion: The Constitution Sesquicentennial is still the most important event that has occurred in the last decade or the next ten years to come, and should be recognized as such by the Postoffice Department's issuance of more than one stamp.

What's In A Name?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of September 5, "Seen in Perspective," marks a high-water point in summing up international conditions. The few or many who think that what is done in Ethiopia, Spain and China has no bearing on our own nation are of all men most superficial.

We saw a so-called "undeclared war" on a defenseless, semi-civilized people in Africa as a "punitive measure," then as a move to "civilize and Christianize" the people. Every reason for the outrage was given but the true one. But Italy got by with it.

The rebels now ruining Spain, joined by Moslem Moors and sustained by the millions of a dissolute former King and by the aid of Italian and German warriors, proclaim that this rebellion is to "put down communism." And these forces which have as their real aim to add another country to the Fascist-Nazi regime, are permitted to get by with their devastation of one of the most beautiful lands on earth.

Japan, always an imitator, uses the phrase, "undeclared war," and armed with it, invades China in one of the most blood-curdling, wholesale murders ever witnessed since time began. But our "neutrality policy" seems not to be able to cope with the situation, since Japan has used the phrase, "undeclared war." So Japan will imitate Mussolini, probably, and "get by with it."

The spirit that invaded Ethiopia, devastated Spain, and is now murdering China is the spirit which is fed by hesitation and even cowardice on the part of those who have the power to act, yet fear to act. Nations and men have been permitted to call a rose by some other name, or a skunk for that matter, and thus evade responsibility, not to say punishment.

If, after a sacred promise that the "saloon would never return," we have some 1,800 saloons in our city, but called by some other name, one may well ask: In what particular are we different from those nations which we condemn for permitting themselves to be hoodwinked by mere change of name in national outrages? Toleration is a fine word and patience is a virtue, but there comes a time in the affairs of men and nations when a "stitch in time saves nine." We face it in our own country just now. My word to the editor of The Post is: Turn on the light.

Will Wear His Straw.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: September 15 will soon be here, and I have been frequently told there is an unwritten "law" or, rather custom, in Washington, which "forbids" a man to wear a straw hat after this date, and that the violator of this custom is liable to subject himself to ridicule.

All I can say is that such is a most ridiculous regulation. I have no idea what body of men brought it into existence. I can only think it was effected for the benefit of the hatters and the hat industry.

The month of September seems likely to be just as hot as the preceding months, and if this be the case, I, for one, intend to go on enjoying the comfort of a light straw hat, notwithstanding this most curious and (I think) ridiculous edict. I value my health and comfort, and prefer common sense and criticism, to discomfort and falling in line with "strap-hangers" of convention.

My advice is: If a scorching hot sun is beating down upon us day by day, and a straw hat is necessary and convenient, by all means let us wear it, and let us never mind the comments and ridicule of immature youth.

Lewis' Challenge.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I listened to John L. Lewis' challenge to the President in his arrogant speech, full of half-truths and nontruths. I am glad that he issued the challenge, because it will force the President to reveal to those of us who voted for him whether he is the President of all the people, or the President of the labor unions, which includes only a fraction of the American people.

Twice I have voted for Roosevelt for President. Millions voted for him who have no affiliation with labor unions. If the President believes the support of these unions is more important than the support of the great middle class, who are finding their costs of living soaring as a result of concessions to "workers" (as Lewis calls them, with the implication that the rest of us live by clipping coupons) let him give them everything they ask for and bow his head to their authorities. If he intends to keep faith with the rest of us, let him denounce Lewis for the hypocrite he is, and demand that the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. assume responsibility under the laws of the country, which they invoke for the protection of labor.

If the country has a President, I shall support him; if only the unions have a President, I shall oppose him vigorously, even to the point of voting the Republican ticket in State and national elections.

If the President thinks this is the extreme view of only one voter, let him ask for advice outside of the White House as to what the feeling on this subject is throughout the country.

ALEXANDER McMAHON.
Laurel, Md., Sept. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While tuned to one of our local stations the other evening, I was startled to hear the voice of the leader of the C. I. O. break into a tirade against those whom he believes thwarted his political aspirations. His venom was sufficient evidence of the manner of man that heads that organization. At least, it is a criterion of what one may expect if his personal ambitions are realized. His outspoken threats to take summary action against those who frustrated his designs are but the vitriolic drivel of a defeatist. Such an attitude as he has taken savors of Russia, Germany, etc. "Off with Their Heads" is his motto.

His analogy of those who sup with labor was too far-fetched and puerile. No good host intentionally puts his guest under obligations. I believe Emily Post will bear me out in this statement. On second thought, Lewis, by no stretch of the imagination, represented the labor movement, as a whole, therefore, he is in no position to speak for it. We are all convinced that labor has never gained anything for which it did not have to fight, but the methods employed by the C. I. O. are open to the severest criticism.

Mr. Lewis' harping on the Bill of Rights also gives one an insight into his one-sided interpretation of that important document. According to his version, only those striking members of his organization come under it. Yet, the million of freemen who wish to exercise their God-given prerogative of peaceful employment are verbally castigated, and, on numerous occasions, physically restrained.

The broadcasting system rendered Mr. Lewis a great service by deleting some parts of his original speech and modifying others. It would have had a greater repercussion, and not to the benefit of the C. I. O.

Noise At Night.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can't something be done in regard to the noise on the streets at night? It has gotten so it is almost impossible to get a night's rest. I think if a fine were imposed for unnecessary noises and the policemen would enforce the law it would be a great blessing.

The Post Impressionist

BEING robbed is such a commonplace nowadays the papers won't mention it unless you are burgled of a horse, cow, old master, string of pearls, or a minimum of $1,000. They won't even give you a paragraph if you're robbed of your wife. It's not news.

So you can see what chance I had of getting a line in the papers last week when burglars swiped my new suit out of the closet, leaving me with the other to face the winter, the one I had on, a nice linen number, which is lovely for this time of year, but which will need a fur collar and fur trouser cuffs in a few months, unless I move to Panama. Have you any old rabbits?

Anyway, I'm sore at the reporters for not interviewing me about my biggest experience in years, so I'm going to write it myself, and to hell with them. Of course, the most disturbing thing about being robbed of my suit was it wasn't paid for. You can imagine how burned up I am about that. Being expected to pay for a suit I haven't got. What next!

* * *

Another thing that burned me was the casual way the cops took my tragedy. Five different stalwarts of the law marched into my house at various times, breaking up my slumbers, for the purpose, apparently, of sampling my cigarettes and discussing the shamelessness of thieves.

One of them was a fingerprint "expert." He carried a little carpetbag which he set down on a chair while surveying the premises, with, I might add, contempt. Naturally, you couldn't expect a criminologist to go crazy with joy at the thought of detecting a second-hand suit of clothes, but I wish he had shown at least a little enthusiasm.

First he sniffed at the windowsill through which the thief had crept and announced "Nothing there." Next he looked at a table which the thief had pushed away while climbing in the window. "Nothing there." It was getting tiresome.

I had to fairly beg him to get out his mysterious chemicals and see if they could produce any of these wonderful clews you always read about. At last, reluctantly, he dusted some gray powder on the table, glanced at it, shook his head, and said nothing.

Meanwhile another detective was strolling through the living room. He seemed very thoughtful, and I could hardly wait for his solution of the crime. The good detectives, you know, the really good ones, don't bother with clews, but just think everything out. At last he spoke.

"Smells kinda musty in here," he said, gravely.

Well.

The criminologist packed up his bottle of gray powder and camel's hair brush and started for the door. They both said good-by, evidently very glad to escape pneumonia or typhoid or whatever you catch in musty houses. Yes, sir, it was a narrow escape for them.

* * *

Crestfallen that they didn't like my house, I went back to sleep, only to be awakened in a few minutes by two more detectives. One was a very friendly Irishman who shook hands with the charm of a headwaiter to whom you had once given a $5 tip, and the other was a heavy-set gentleman with a black mustache who couldn't have been anything else but a detective. The facial expression, the cigar, the feet—all were perfect.

"Ha, blood!" he exclaimed.

I rapidly began a search for my roommate, believing he had been murdered by the burglar, but, unfortunately, he was still alive and was merely in the kitchen drinking a coca cola before breakfast, an enchanting habit of his.

With the detectives I peered at the strange dark spot on the cream window shade. Then I remembered. I had swatted a fly there. This angle of the case cleared up, we went on to a discussion of the Keene murder mystery.

"I think it was suicide," the detective said. "You can't tell me that fellow Keene was murdered on the Norfolk boat that night."

"Oh, yes, he was murdered," I rejoined warmly.

We haggled about this for awhile, me sitting in bed in my pajamas and the detectives comfortably planted in rocking chairs, smoking away, until I finally gave up and agreed Keene was a suicide. That seemed to satisfy them, so they left. Thank heaven.

* * *

Then there was the policeman on the beat. He reminded me, most tactlessly, I thought, of a large number of parking tickets he had given me, and also brought out the point that the thief would probably sell my suit for 50 cents or at the most 75, which didn't make me feel any better.

So the whole darn thing was just one long denouement. There I was, all worked up, facing a winter in a linen suit, not a sable in the house, and all I got was comedy—good comedy to be sure, but not half as much fun as if I hadn't been the victim. Oh, well, every cloud has a silver lining, I always say, even if it's only tin.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Red Manning.

THERE HAS BEEN a strange development in the newspaper shops of this country in the last few years. The office boy has become a class conscious man, measuring his time by the clock, storing his overtime and voting "Strike" or "No Strike" on an equal footing with the star re-write man. He may be a college graduate or a horn-rimmed night school student who intends to be a lawyer, a pharmacist or a labor leader, or possibly an essayist for the deep-thinking butchers' paper magazines.

He was not always thus. Richard Harding Davis wrote in his story called "Gallagher" the greatest fiction piece about an office boy that was ever put to paper. Gallagher helped the star reporter scoop the town on the story of a bootleg prize fight that was produced in a barn out in the suburbs. An incorrigible little devil he was, but heart and soul a newspaper reporter of the old school. There were many Gallaghers even into my time, which began somewhat after the day of Richard Harding Davis.

We had a Gallagher in the United Press shop, in New York, about 1913 by the name of Harold Manning. He was an Irish kid about 15 years old, and for reasons which need no development he was known to one and all as Red.

• • • •

RED MANNING was very fresh, but a fire engine chaser and a reporter, a newspaperman in his very heart. His principal duty was to make "books," as they were called in the press association shops, and keep a large supply on hand for emergencies. A "book" was a combination of flimsy paper and carbon sheets, and it took skill and industry to keep enough of them hidden away in odd corners to meet such terrible trials as a Triangle factory fire or a Titanic disaster, when the telegraph operators would be yelling "Books! Books!" every few minutes.

In those crises an operator would type off only a couple of words or a couple of lines per book, then rip it out of the typewriter and toss it over to the man who was feeding outgoing wires. The kid was expected to produce a new pile of books from some inexhaustible source to meet these demands.

Meantime he had also to rip off the flimsy sheets and stab them onto spikes around the shop for the writers and wire editors, and he was expected to say "Bulletin!" if the news on the sheet was urgent or "Flash!" if it was extra urgent. He had enough to do.

Red Manning did all this, and he was a fine office boy, except that he was inclined to be fresh beyond the tolerance of older men. So, once, after the patience of his elders was exhausted, he was fired.

After that, for several months in our little shop, we had a dreadful succession of indifferent lazy, stupid little misfits. They came and went, day by day, sallow, swarthy, completely unit children, who simply had no appreciation of the job. They would lay off and leave us in a bad fix when they felt that way, and they never had any books stuck away in secret places for emergencies, as Red always had. Finally, on election night in 1912, when Woodrow Wilson was beating Taft and Theodore Roosevelt, things were in a terrible jam.

• • • •

A NATIONAL ELECTION night was an event which nobody has ever described. The wires clacking, the smell of egg sandwiches and coffee from the Greasy Spoon downstairs, the smells of cigarette smoke and carbon papers, and flimsy steam heat and men, and the cries of "Flash!" and "Bulletin!" and "68 out of 234 counties in Wisconsin give Wilson so-and-so many votes."

In this crisis the boss heard a familiar voice at his ears crying "Bulletin!" and looked up to see our old friend Red Manning, who had been fired for being too fresh. He wanted to kiss Red. He looked over at the office boy's desk, where two little rapscallions had been doing the work of one Irishman for several weeks, and doing it badly, and asked, "What are you doing here, Red? Where are those others?"

"I threw them bums out," Red said. "You need a newspaperman on a night like tonight. "Bulletin! Bulletin!"

Red wasn't exactly rehired. He just came back to work, and he stayed on until he died, a couple of years later, of heart disease.

One of the last memories of Red Manning was an office bulletin which he typed himself and passed around to everyone in the shop—a personal ultimatum which read:

"Notice—Hereafter you are requested to call me Harold and stop calling me Red. (Signed) RED."

Jersey Primaries

By Eugene Pharo.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Camden, N. J.

ONE OF THE more fascinating events that marked the incoming of September in New Jersey was the Camden County Republican Association's ox roast at which, besides a fat man's race, a three-legged race, a sack race, and a horseshoe pitching contest for men, and a screaming contest and "roller pin throw" for women, there was a speech by the Rev. Lester H. Clee, of the Second Presbyterian Church, Newark, N. J. He is Republican State Senator from Essex County, and founder of the Essex County Good Government League.

Senator Clee, sometimes called "the fighting parson," is being welcomed in a good many counties by young and independent Republicans as the white hope of the party against Mayor Hague's candidate, United States Senator A. Harry Moore (Dem.), in the November 9 election for Governor. This in spite of the fact that a Hoffman-supported candidate is in the field to oppose Clee for the Republican nomination at the primaries on September 21; he is Clifford R. Powell, State Senator from Burlington County, and a regular party Republican of long standing.

Split May Insure Democratic Victory.

THIS INDICATES a victory for the Democratic candidate; but under present circumstances is far from making such a victory a foregone conclusion. For the support for Clee obviously is from those who are tired of domination by either party's machine, and it is nourished by labor organizations that are fed up with Hoffman and Hague alike. Thus Clee's nomination would result in a fight of some significance; something that may be doubted should Powell prove winner at the primaries.

In fact, the present status of Senator Clee's candidacy has in it a number of paradoxical factors that may throw more light than was originally expected on the temper of public opinion toward the major parties, and toward the sort of "liberalism" exemplified by the New Deal. For currently the Newark clergyman has cinched most of the appeals on which the New Deal depends for its strength, and has mingled with them certain axioms of the Republican creed as well.

He has, besides, a reputation for independence that should enable him to make some headway in an attempt to carry water on both shoulders. So that if he is given the opportunity to try, through being made his party's candidate at the primaries, his following would come near to composing, in New Jersey, the body of a new party, neither strictly Republican nor Democrat, but liberal. Therefore he seems about to play the role of catalyst, setting in motion within the State certain party changes whose certainty the recent session of Congress demonstrated nationally.

Senator Clee's campaign, which is now going into high, is devoted largely to discussing the need for reorganizing the State government along efficient and economical lines, and to delaying the imposition of any new taxes until the citizens can be sure that moneys already available are being devoted to public, as contrasted with private political, ends.

In contrast, the utterances of Senator Powell, and of his sponsor, Gov. Hoffman, are of a more personal flavor. Hoffman, whose espousal of Powell's cause automatically estranged from it the organized labor forces of the State, has declaimed against Clee's candidacy on the ground that the clergyman has not been a regular party worker, and that, besides, he was an obstructive force in the recent Legislature so far as Hoffman's own plans were concerned.

Powell, besides seconding the criticism of Clee on the ground of party loyalty, has emphasized his own length of service (16 years) in the Legislature. And he chose to announce his candidacy at a time when he was attending the annual encampment of the State militia as a brigadier general of the National Guard, and when his World War service could be referred to aptly by his fellow officer, Col. Hoffman. But as for specific issues of the State government, he has as yet refrained from becoming too explicit. Instead he has declared has lack of commitments to any political groups, and his intention to do everybody as much good as possible.

Sen. Harry Moore Has Declared Little.

IN THE MEANTIME the announced candidate of the Democratic party, United States Senator A. Harry Moore, the hand-picked candidate of Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, the State's one big political boss, has been sitting tight and saying very little. Doubtless he is holding his fire until after the primaries, when he will be able to see just who he is fighting. Mr. Moore is one of the few men who has been Governor for two terms (no Governor can succeed himself immediately). His first term was from 1925 to 1928, and his second from 1931 to 1934, at which time he was elected to the United States Senate with the backing of Hague, and the benefit of the Roosevelt national landslide.

But his record in the Senate has not set well with the New Deal element in his home State, nor has the labor record of Mayor Hague been such as to inspire confidence in the good faith of any candidate that he backs. Therefore labor's Non-Partisan League, which has both A. F. of L. and C. I. O. adherents in its ranks, as well as large numbers of WPA beneficiaries, has declared against Moore, as well as against Hoffman, and Hoffman's candidacy. And it has indicated its friendship for Senator Clee, provided the latter proves sufficiently receptive to its program. This includes enactment of a State "Little Wagner Act," anti-injunction legislation, overhauling of the State Department of Labor, and barring use of State police in strike situations.

So far, all that Senator Clee has said concerning a labor program is, "I think I understand the man who works as well as the man who employes labor," pointing out that he has himself been a working man, having started life as a mill-hand. Yet on the labor and other specific questions he has so far preserved a non-committal sympathy that so far is one of the mildly maddening features of the whole New Jersey political scene. No one is squarely behind anything, with the exception that those who oppose a sales tax are quite frank in saying so, for the reason that such a tax, which was tried for a little while last year, proved so universally unpopular that Gov. Hoffman was forced to veto it.

Jewish Feast Day Complicates Politics.

AT PRESENT relief moneys which were diverted from road funds last spring largely because Senator Clee and two other Republicans joined the Senate Democrats in voting for such diversion are expected to be exhausted by November 1. The Legislature has recessed until November 15; and September 21 happens to be the Jewish Feast of Succoth. These two apparently unrelated occasions have provided material for a sort of final duel between Gov. Hoffman and Senator Clee, from which the former evidently expects some benefit to accrue to his candidate, Senator Powell.

For Clee has requested an earlier session of the Legislature, in order to change the primary date so that Jewish voters may have a longer time to use the polls than from sunset onward on September 21. And Gov. Hoffman, plainly intent on trying the sales tax again, and thus gaining a final victory for real estate and concrete interests before leaving office, has tried to draw out Senator Clee on his willingness to open other legislative subjects besides the primary date, should a special session of the Legislature be called. Clee's answers are pleasantly vague, although expressing willingness to take up anything that is for the benefit of the public.

Altogether, in spite of the three or four cornered contest at present going on in the State (the fourth corner being presented by the assumption that Gov. Hoffman may later seek a second term for himself, and is thus building fences while appearing to serve Powell), there does not seem to be much except political jockeying to the fore, just as there was in the recent session of the Legislature. And those who seek Utopian improvements, not really expecting them from either party machine, are being wafted in the direction of Clee, largely because he is a clergyman with a persuasive voice and because he is comparatively independent.

For Doodlers

By Bett Hooper

"Let Your Mind Alone."

IT'S ABOUT TIME somebody made a counter attack on the Emily Posts, the Marjorie Hillises, the Dorothea Brandes and the Walter Pitkinses. And I know of no one better qualified to lead the revolt against budgeted sanity than James Thurber. It has almost come to the place where a person can't settle down to a well-earned and comfortable middle age. Relax at 40? No, no, a thousand times no, says Dr. Pitkin, whose contentions might well have paved the road from Baltimore to Balmoral.

Now comes ole Doc Thurber, who says, in a book of that title, "Let Your Mind Alone." Cut out that "hour of silence;" don't live alone if you don't like it; quit skipping chicken salad on the menu if you really want it; and for goodness' sake, as well as your own, quit indulging in a comedy of manners which simply comes down to being much ado about nothing.

A hundred million guinea pigs are now "doodles"—conscious. Take me, for instance. There was nothing I used to enjoy so much as drawing dogwood blossoms while I was otherwise engaged in talking over the telephone. But now I wouldn't be caught dead dawdling over a dogwood design. That fatal form of neurosis known as "pixillated" is an albatross around my neck. A once cheery and harmless (that's what I thought) pastime has assumed awesome aspects, calling for a "Masterful Adjustment," for under this new order of getting on to yourself I have diagnosed my own case as that of a "dogwood ditherer."

I finished Thurber's book last night. Today I am back to filling in circles and joining angles and am again as happy as Marjorie Hillis when she makes $2 go where the rest of us have always made $2 go.

• • • •

IT'S THURBER'S argument that the majority of mental-efficiency books set up and knock down problems which are, in the first place, "unimaginative and pedestrian." In the second place, he believes that even if they weren't "unimaginative and pedestrian," they are out-of-the-way and exceptional hurdles which Mr. Average Man hardly, if ever, comes across. In the third place, sometimes known as "to show," he contends that even if the first two are true, all of us are still able to cope with them without consulting a psychoanalyst, or an ouija board.

There is, for instance, the problem which Dr. Mursell brings up in his best seller, "Streamline Your Mind." Dr. Mursell is one of the leading disciples of the use-what-you've-got-at-hand creed. No doubt this was the inspiration for the first recipe on hash, but Dr. Mursell can't be blamed for that, no matter what Thurber says. Do you know, gentle reader, "how to conduct a lady to a table in a restaurant?" This naturally leads a young man, who heretofore has had no trouble whatsoever in getting his fair companion to a table, into all sorts of thought-provoking quandaries. What holds are barred, if any? Which takes precedence—the pushee or the pullee system? Why, indeed, take a lady to a restaurant at all?

Thurber says there is altogether too much of this sort of thing going on among our best people. And all because every other *book that comes out these days is preaching Stop, Look, Listen, He Who Does Not Hesitate Is Lost, and Do Not Act Your Age!

• • • •

THIS BOOK of Thurber's has not only amused me, but it has saved me from any number of horrible complexes which would surely have been my lot upon finishing another book which has just been sent me for review. The title of it is "Dynamite, or What Do People Think of You?" and is by Doris Webster and Mary Alden Hopkins.

All the left-hand pages of this little helper are filled with questions, and the opposite pages are blanks, squared off for your answers. For instance: "Does X object strongly to the rich being reviled just because they are rich?" "Does X think it is all right to: (a) Evade paying one's full income tax if one can get away with it; (b) bribe a motor cop; (c) avoid being a witness in an accident case?" Well, you see where that leaves me, don't you? So I immediately turn to Old Antidote Thurber (I call him Anti, though he's really no relation of mine) and find that on pages 4 and 5 he says "that man will be better off if he quits monkeying with his mind and just lets it alone." I hope gradually, by continual references to Thurber, to get to the place where I don't think at all.

Another case in hand (a case in hand, by the way, is worth two in the warehouse) is the way in which Thurber helps you to shake off the all-too-good influence of Emily Post. I'm dead sure Mrs. Post means to be helpful, but apparently she doesn't have any idea what effect some of her rules have on timid people.

Under the sub-head, "Further Obligations of the Bridegroom," she states quite flatly that the fee for the clergyman may be "one or two new $100 bills." Just suppose that Mary, as she cuddles up to John in a taxi leaving the church, should say, "And did you remember, ducky-wucky, to give the clergyman a one or two new $100 bills?" And suppose that poor John would have to admit that he gave the preacher two $100 bills, but that they were old ones? Can't you see Mary's shame and John's distress? Can't you hear Mary's anguished cry, "Why didn't you tell me this before we were married?"

John is apt, if he takes seriously Dr. Shellow's book, "How to Develop Your Personality," to brood. If he is an earnest young man, he may feel that his is a clear case of "Unconscious Substitution" or "Falsification of Premise." He might even go further and associate himself with those suffering from "Disregard of the Indefinite Article." Here again Thurber gallops to the rescue and a hundred or two greenbacks bite the dust.

For if John is a wise young man, he will go out and purchase a copy of "Let Your Mind Alone." Then when old mole-hill makers like Post, Hillis, Brande, Pitkin, Bisch and Shellow get too much for him, he will be able to give 'em the bird and finish 'em off with the retort superb, "Oh, yeah!"

"LET YOUR MIND ALONE," by James Thurber. (Harper & Bros., $2.50.)

"DYNAMITE," by Webster and Hopkins. (D. Appleton-Century, $1.)

"HOW TO LOSE FRIENDS AND ALIENATE PEOPLE," by Irving Tressler. (Stackpole Sons, $1.45.) (One of the exceptions.)

Income of TVA For Year Rises To $1,650,000

33,569 Customers Used 787,460,000 Kilowatt Hours in 12 Months.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 7.—Officials of the Tennessee Valley Authority said today 787,460,000 kilowatt hours of electricity were generated at three TVA dams in the fiscal year ended July 1, for a gross revenue of $1,650,000.

This compared with the generation of 467,700,000 kilowatt hours and gross revenue of $1,170,000 in the preceding year.

Since 1934, when the TVA took over active operation of the war-time Wilson Dam on the Tennessee River at Muscle Shoals, Ala., and started a dam-building program on the Tennessee tributaries, it has produced 1,784,660,000 kilowatt hours of electricity which brought a gross income of $4,210,000.

Has 33,569 Customers.

TVA officials explained that operating expenses and net operating revenues in its "yardstick" power program would not be available until October, when the annual report is prepared.

Today, the Authority is serving 33,569 customers in 17 municipalities, 14 farm co-operatives and TVA communities in northern Alabama, northwest Georgia, northeast Mississippi and east, middle and west Tennessee.

It has in service 1,100 miles of high-voltage transmission lines, connecting Norris, Wheeler and Pickwick Landing dams, and extending into middle Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama.

A 102-mile, 154,000-volt line from Pickwick Landing Dam to Memphis has just been completed.

Approximately 3,000 miles of lines carry TVA electricity to municipal and rural customers. Under construction are 166 miles of high-voltage transmission lines, six substations and 500 miles of rural lines.

At Peak in 1944.

The Authority's power production, officials explained, will reach its peak about 1944.

TVA directors predict that six industrials contracts eventually will yield an annual income of around $4,300,000. The expected yearly revenue: Aluminum Co. of America, $1,500,000; Monsanto Chemical Co., $750,000; Arkansas Power & Light Co., $750,000; Victor Chemical Works, $500,000; Volunteer Portland Cement Co., $60,000; Electro-Metallurgical Co., $750,000.

"TVA will not actually be financially successful until after 18 months, when these contracts are using their normal consumption," said David E. Lilienthal, TVA director.

The Authority so far has spent $150,900,000. Its new annual appropriation is approximately $40,000,000.

Cotton Crop 'Fair' On Roosevelt Farm At Warm Springs

Warm Springs, Ga., Sept. 7 (AP).—Pickers on the Roosevelt place today began gathering a "pretty good" cotton crop—Farmer Franklin D. Roosevelt's first.

And if the rainy weather hadn't brought on boll weevil infestation and got him "in the grass," Roosevelt would have harvested a real bumper crop from his 40-acre patch.

Edward Moore, who assists his father, Otis, in supervising the 2,000-acre Roosevelt farm on Pine Mountain, near here, said corn and feed crops for the President's prized herd of 75 white-faced Herefords are major crops on the Roosevelt farm.

"Cotton's looking pretty good, we've finished sawing timber, haying is well under way and yep, we'll make a good report to the boss," the gangling farm worker said.

Van SweringenRail Case Opens Sept. 21

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday set for hearing September 21 its investigation of the Alleghany and Chesapeake corporations, holding companies in the Van Sweringen rail empire.

Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie and Examiner O. L. Mohundro will conduct the inquiry into the holdings of common carrier securities, and operations and practices of the two holding companies.

Named as respondents were Robert R. Young, Frank F. Molbe and Alan P. Kirby, New York industrialists, who recently acquired control of the Van Sweringen rail interests.

U. S. Will Transfer Its 'Idle Fleet'

By the Associated Press.

The maritime commission expects to save $50,000 annually in maintenance costs by concentrating the serviceable vessels in the idle fleet at Fort Eustis, Va.

The commission disclosed yesterday that as rapidly as its surveys demonstrates these old vessels, constructed during the war emergency, are fit for further service, they will be transferred from Staten Island, N. Y., to the James River base. Conditions in the James were regarded better for safekeeping of the vessels.

Early Birds.

Three titans of the American Federation of Government Employes—President Charles I. Stengle, Secretary Bernice B. Heffner and Treasurer Cecil E. Custer—boarded train yesterday afternoon for the City of Brotherly Love to start the national convention ball a-rolling.

They went early, to attend the meeting of the executive council, scheduled to open tomorrow and to convene otherwise before the convention gets under way Monday. Others to move on the executive council from Washington are National Vice Presidents Michael D. Schaefer, Ira Y. Bain and G. Carroll Dimond.

The rush of delegates upon Philadelphia—as far as Washington is concerned—will begin Sunday at 1:30 p. m., by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The big show opens at 10 a. m. Monday, and will continue through Thursday.

Meanwhile, and this early, there is a scuffle by several cities to get the 1938 convention. Chicago and Jacksonville are reported as leading contenders.

• • • •

The delegates will be in Philadelphia in an interesting period. They can witness elaborate observances, including a Mummers' parade, the "Parade of the Nations," a Constitution exhibit, and music festival.

But most of the time they will be busy. President Stengle has tried to shape the committees so every delegate will have some part in the conduct of the big event.

New President.

Lee H. Shugar, well known to Government people—himself being an active one—has been elected president of the newly organized Maryland Voters League of Washington. A program for the year includes a free course in public speaking, social functions and forums. The first general meeting will be in October, with Herbert O'Connor, attorney general of Maryland, as the speaker. The league is nonpolitical and nonpartisan. Temporary offices have been established in Room 819, 1406 G street northwest. All Marylanders in the District may join. Marguerite L. Krenek is handling publicity.

Vacation Relief.

The relief that came upon Joseph D. Cooper, editor of the Agriculture Exchange—an employe bulletin—while vacationing, is related in a lead editorial in the current issue:

"Every one of the 15 days we were away was spent in hard work, yet we felt we were having a real vacation. There were no telephones ringing. No one could call up and say his copy of the Exchange arrived late. No one could ask us where he could get a ride some place. There was no one to bawl us out because his pet organization didn't receive front page space. In fact, there was comparative peace, even though it was among military surroundings."

Salute to Ramspeck.

Harry G. Ritner, editor, Washington Federal Bulletin, writes this column a letter saluting Representative Ramspeck. He says:

While I do not know personally the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, the record shows that Representative Robert Ramspeck put up one of the grandest fights championing the merit system that has been seen in many years. This action was indeed contrary to the thoughts lurking in the minds of Federal employes when Ramspeck became chairman of the Civil Service Committee. When Representative William I. Sirovich, who represents Greenwich Village, relinquished the committeeship in favor of Ramspeck to retain his Patent Committee chairmanship, Federal employes were much disturbed. They knew Sirovich as a learned man who had the feelings to better conditions and pay of Federal employes. Because Ramspeck represented Atlanta, his idea on pay and hours was expected as satisfactory.

But it was learned that Ramspeck also represented a farm district whose vote was necessary to win at the polls. Prior to his re-election no action on any bill of importance affecting Federal employes ever left the committee room. Then came along the Seventy-fifth Congress. The records during the first session show him battling for all his worth to insert merit provisions. Whispers that Ramspeck made a motion to take out the CCC civil service provisions is true. But only to fulfill the wishes of a well-liked colleague, Bill Connery.

Ramspeck stated that in the nearly eight years he had been a member of the Congress, this was the first time he had ever made a motion to take civil service provision out of a bill. The record shows that Congressman Ramspeck voted against his own motion. Not long before adjournment Ramspeck made this statement on the floor of the House: "I have no quarrel with any member of this House who does not agree with me about civil service." Federal employes need have no fear.

With Representative Robert Ramspeck as chairman of the Civil Service Committee the merit system will be championed as last year.

McGrady Quits ToBecomeRCA Labor Advisor

Roosevelt Announces Retirement of Miss Perkins' Assistant.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7.—President Roosevelt announced today the resignation of his chief mediator of labor disputes, Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Gen. James G. Harbord, chairman of the board of Radio Corporation of America, announced in New York that McGrady would become director of labor relations for R. C. A.

The President accepted the resignation with "deep regret" and said he was glad McGrady's services would always be available to the Government if special need arose.

After being an official of the American Federation of Labor, McGrady was active in peace negotiations in the maritime, steel and auto labor troubles.

There was no White House comment on reports from Shanghai that the American Chamber of Commerce in the Chinese city had protested the President's statement of last Sunday to the effect that Americans still in China were remaining at their own risk or a report that the Japanese seized the American Seventh Day Adventist Mission property north of Shanghai. Any comment would have to come from the State Department, it was said.

McGrady's resignation said he had withheld taking a private position as long as he and the President felt his public duty outweighed his private need. He said he was proud to have been joined with the President in his "valiant battle for the common man" and added it was some compensation to know he was going in a field of work he had spent his active life—"improvement of relations between labor and management in industry."

He said his new employer had agreed that whenever the President needs him for special work he would always be available.

Goodyear Warfare On Union Denied

Gadsden, Ala., Sept. 7 (AP).—The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. of Alabama denied today, through its general superintendent, labor board charges of discrimination against United Rubber Workers of America members in the Gadsden plant.

A. C. Michaels, chief executive for Goodyear here, testified he did not even know the names of U. R. W. A. members and had "employed no spies to learn them."

Michaels took the stand after more than three weeks of testimony during which about 60 persons were called to support the board's allegations.

Forest Fires Increase In Northeast States

By the Associated Press.

Forest Service officials announced yesterday Northeastern States, including Virginia, suffered 263 forest fires up to September 1 in comparison with a five-year average of 246 for a corresponding period.

However, they said, the number of acres destroyed was 2,173 in comparison with a five-year average of 3,716 for the eight-month period. The fire hazard in the Northwest was reported "low to medium."

Coast Guard Saved 7,631.

By the Associated Press.

Coast Guardsmen saved 7,631 lives and gave assistance to vessels valued at nearly $100,000,000 during the year ended June 30, officials announced yesterday. The number of lives saved was the largest for any year in the 147 year history of the service.

Lucky Woman To Get Slippers Of 'Stella Dallas'

Hamilton Rainbow Room to Give Away Shoes Worn in Movie.

By Chanticleer

Some Washington girl will be the proud owner of a new pair of shoes tomorrow night—and she'll never wear them either. They'll be the shoes that Barbara Stanwyck wore in the filming of "Stella Dallas."—souvenir shoes at it were. By arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn studios, the Rainbow Room of the Hamilton Hotel got the slippers and a plan has been worked out whereby some lucky woman in the Rainbow Room tomorrow will get them.

Johnny Perkins, rotund master of ceremonies at the Capitol Theater this week, will make the presentation in behalf of Stanley S. Gordon, manager of the hotel. Just before the presentation, Ginger Lee, comely songstress in the Rainbow Room, will model the slippers and a dress also worn by Miss Stanwyck in the filming of "Stella Dallas." But the dress has to be returned to the star.

It's one of those things, with a large crowd to be on hand, so make your plans in plenty of time. Thursday night in the Rainbow Room.

Big Applers by the scads, Big Applers of the dyed in the wool variety, young Big Applers and fat ones and good ones and uninitiated ones, converged on Boulevard Farms last Friday night and made the rafters ring for Good Old Big Apple. It was the first official demonstration of this new dance, and if the interest manifested can be the rule, Big Appling will be the dance in Washington for the fall season. You can bet after that demonstration that Big Apple music will be at Boulevard Farms every night from now on.

If you've never been able to go for ballroom dancing in a big way, don't give up yet. If that fluffy cloud of chiffon on the fair maiden and the sleek appearance of her partner; if the music so soft under the lights—bore you, just forget it and drop in at the Shoreham and see Rosita and Fontana. They'll make you take it all back. Even the "lonliest man in town" goes for it.

Latest arrival at the King Cole Room is Don Vicente de la Garza, who hails from Monterey, Mexico, and has already made many friends here via radio. The Don strums a guitar and sings Mexican and Spanish songs most pleasingly. And all done in the garb of the native Monterey. Joan English remains for a short time longer.

The Wallace Whitneys also are present with "Tango of the Cobra." Bill Strickland and h' boys for dancing.

New Limits Found In Revised Law on Marriage in D. C.

The new District marriage law is even more strict than has been supposed, it was learned yesterday when officers of the District Court acted to comply with the changes.

The law, popularly known as a three-day marriage law, reads that marriages may not be solemnized until three days have elapsed from the date of application for the license. Thus, an application taken out on a Monday must be held until Friday before it can be used.

Such, at least, was the interpretation of Justice F. Dickinson Letts and Jesse C. Adkins, and of the attorneys in the legislative division of the Department of Justice. The present law permits immediate marriages.

It is expected that the number of marriage licenses issued here will take a huge drop when the new law is placed in effect next Monday morning. Many are issued now to visitors who do not remain long enough to comply with the law.

Lawyer Contends Reds Run C. I. O.

Los Angeles, Sept 7 (AP).—Aaron Sapiro, nationally known lawyer, addressed an open letter today to John L. Lewis, in which he charged that "various communists are trying to divert the labor movement into a communist movement" on the Pacific Coast.

Sapiro wrote that he would take legal action to prove his charges in open court, and added:

"If you want communists to run the C. I. O. on this coast, that is your privilege, but you have no right to do it secretly. The workers are entitled to know who pulls the string on their leaders."

Brownrigg, Ex-U.S.Aide, Gets Michigan Position

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 7 (AP).—William Brownrigg, chief administrative officer of the California Civil Service Commission, and a native of Manistee, Mich., was appointed director of civil service for Michigan today by Gov. Frank Murphy.

He was office manager of the War Risk Insurance Board at Washington following the World War.

Applicants Swamp Security Office on False Job Rumors

Whoever started reports that the Social Security Board needs 1,200 more clerical workers for its operation section in Baltimore has caused the board plenty of extra work—but nobody got a job.

The board yesterday made it clear that it has no jobs, and that all vacancies—when they occur—have to be made from Civil Service Commission ranks. The personnel turnover in the Baltimore office is light, the board explained, with not more than five resignations a month.

The board now has on file approximately 50,000 applications for jobs.

The former's recently adopted resolutions, he said, advocate "abolition of private ownership" and "overthrow of our whole economic system . . . by the necessary political and economic action"

The Governors, together with utility commissioners of their States, have been active in prosecuting a case before the Interstate Commerce Commission, seeking a reduction of rates.

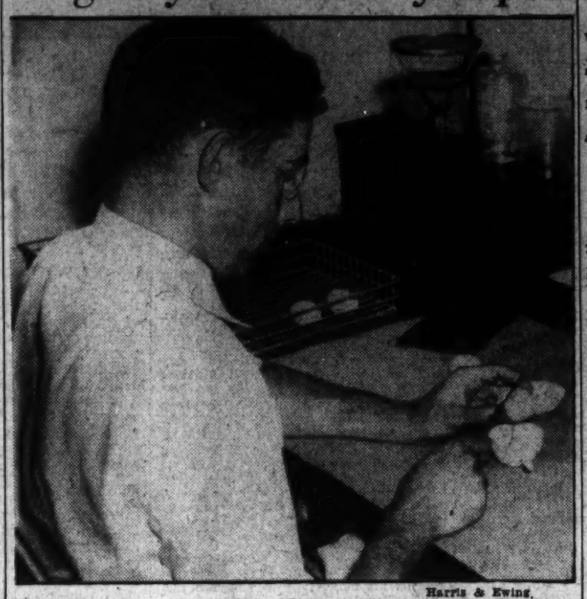
Hen That Lays Upstanding Egg Sought by U. S. Poultry Expert



Harris & Ewing.

A. B. Godfrey, of the Department of Agriculture's experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., testing eggs to determine how the cross-breeding of chickens may affect their food value and the consistency of yolks and whites.

Americans prefer eggs that stand up when broken and have no use for a namby-pamby that goes spreading all over the plate, believes the Department of Agriculture.

As a consequence the department is conducting a series of chicken breeding experiments designed to give them hens that will lay eggs with upstanding yolks and thick whites.

Somewhat concerned about the apparent decrease in per capita consumption, the department hopes to put more eggs into circulation—by making eggs more to the customer's liking.

Although a thin white is not proof of an old egg, some customers think it is and it probably will be easier for the department to develop an egg white that will stay thick in all sorts of weather than to dispel such a thought.

The color of the yolk also is being studied, especially the effect that certain diets have upon it. Americans love eggs with golden yolks, with the variance being more toward lemon color than toward orange.

"The color of the yolk does not within itself indicate the percentage of vitamin A in the egg, but the golden yolk is an indication that the hen had access to green feed or yellow corn, and these do contain vitamin A," says Berley Winton, chairman of the department's poultry investigators.

On the other hand, a hen who gets her sunshine by way of an adequate amount of cod liver oil may produce an egg that has a normal amount of vitamin A, but with an unattractive pale yolk that nobody will want. This is not always true.

As to whether eggs with nice thick whites can be whipped into a thick and upstanding meringue quicker and easier, that's a question for the home economics section. The poultry section is thinking in terms of eggs customers will see on their breakfast plates—and not especially about the eggs that will end life as part of an angel food cake.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Anguished by 'Fine, Sensitive, Honest' Husband's Interest in Another Woman, Wife Asks Help.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I need help and advice and come to you humbly. My husband—basically a fine, sensitive and honest man—has betrayed me to such an extent that I don't know what to do or where to turn. Respective professional pursuits parted us for a time and in that interval there developed for him a friendship with another woman. So intimate is the attachment that she writes him as I do, using the same endearing terms. As a consequence, I hate even to write—in competition.

• • • •

He has spent week-ends with her (not as man and wife); has met her family and acquired a habit of dropping in to see her at her apartment before coming home. Of course, he did not hesitate to lie in order to camouflage his changed habits. When I found out, he was sorry, because, as he said, he "didn't want to hurt" me, as though his very letters hadn't betrayed him.

• • • •

He says he will get over it. He doesn't seem to want a divorce and doesn't know himself what he wants; or if he does, he won't admit it. We have had terrible times, bitter words and heartaches over the situation. He still writes the other woman, with her letters coming to his office, and occasionally has told me he would like to go to see her. While he has been with her, I have disgraced myself by getting drunk, but even that is better than going insane. He even wanted to leave me alone at home one Sunday while he took the woman (who is a nice girl), and her sister to the beach. As it turned out, he took the girl (without her sister) on a Saturday afternoon.

• • • •

Our health is gradually being destroyed. He suggested that we separate for six months, during which time he would work for self-integration. I am willing, providing he neither sees nor corresponds with this girl. Am I right? The idea didn't seem to take. I believe he wanted to see her and then make his decision. He "gave her up" for two weeks; that is, he decided not to see her, although he still wrote her. We had a really lovely time and I think he was happier than he had been for a long time; but he felt he had to call on her one evening. The following week was not so happy.

• • • •

I have spent the summer with him and now it is almost time for me to go back to my work. I wonder if I shall be able to live through the suspicions and doubts? Now, at least, though I spend nights of suffering in thinking of the present and the future, some of my anguish abates when I see him and his sweet, kind face in the morning. He isn't a brute or a hard-boiled "he-man." What would you advise? It looks as though his business might eventually bring him back to the city where I am employed, in which case we would be together again continuously. Isn't life hell?

UNHAPPY WIFE.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR UNHAPPY WIFE: Now that your husband knows that you know about the situation, your only hope of holding him lies, I believe, in giving him a sense of complete freedom to choose between you and the other woman. If your past years together haven't developed a basic comradeship and interdependence sufficient to weather the storm of this passing fancy, your harsh words, hysterical lament, bitter antagonism and anguished martyrdom will not prevail. Indeed, they may, on the contrary, do much to undermine whatever was fine and durable in your marital relationship.

• • • •

I believe the wisest thing you can do is to achieve—at whatever heroic effort—an attitude of serenity; of willingness to accept with brave and quiet grace the ultimate outcome, whatever it may be, during the remainder of your vacation stay with your husband. Let him feel that, for you, the height of the storm has passed; that your life will—that it must—go on, whatever happens. Give him the finest possible impression of yourself. Since he has not been technically unfaithful, continue to give him a devoted wife's responsive affection—until the day of your departure. And in the interim, raise no vocal objections to his seeing the other woman. Ask him only to spare you any recital of his encounters with her.

• • • •

Since your work takes you away from him anyway, I think it would be excellent strategy to subscribe without counter-ultimatum to his suggestion that you separate altogether for six months. The acid test of whether or not he can—or cares to—live without you can only be applied through the complete spiritual and emotional, as well as physical, detachment which would be implicit in such an arrangement.

When you are ready for departure—not before—tell him you have decided, after much thought, to separate for the next half year, pursuant to his suggestion. The element of shock in such a last-minute statement may do wonders toward bringing him to his senses. Tell him this means that so far as you are concerned, he is free to do what he likes; that if he cares to write you, he may, although you think it may be better not to communicate at all, and that you can make no promise as to whether you will write him; that you, after all, quite as much as he, need complete freedom to decide what your future course of action shall be.

• • • •

Let no hint of what your future intentions may be show in your speech or conduct. Don't let him suppose that coming back to you—if such he decides to do—is to be a beautifully simple matter. Leave him with the same uncertainty concerning your intentions that you feel toward his.

• • • •

I realize this is a hazardous undertaking; a daring risk, but as I have said here before (quoting the poet Marquis of Montrose), "he either fears his fate too much, or his deserts are small, that dares not put it to the touch, to gain or lose it all." Because it is a hazardous undertaking—although the only brave and clear-cut course to take—I recommend the more emphatically that you employ these remaining days in being the most companionable, tender and restful sweetheart-wife you can possibly be. Put the other woman out of your mind and conduct yourself as you would if you knew your husband's days, or yours, were briefly numbered. This in itself may work a remarkable change in your mutual relationship, and, above all, it will have for him the fascinating element of surprise; climaxed with a super-surprise in your final announcement outlined above.

• • • •

Very often it takes a jolt of this kind to rekindle a wife's too-long dormant love for her husband, but after it happens, and the wife learns of it, often she lacks the courage and adaptability to release her more constructive emotional reactions. She attempts to badger and browbeat her husband back into the traces, instead of winning him back with a display of love, character and personality. M. H.

Evening Shoes Higher, Models in Paris Show

Paris, (U.P.)—Evening shoes are climbing higher with skirts rising from the heels in slits, and some of the shoes in gold and silver kid lace well above the ankle with thong-like fasteners. Day-time shoes, on the other hand, are lower in cut, and classic pumps are coming back as the most popular shoes for the coming season.

Black, brown, bordeaux and navy are the leading colors for the new winter shoes, following the couturiers' color choice. With evening shoes, shops are showing accessories of gold or silver kid, the same design repeated in shoes, bag, gloves and occasionally a matching belt.

A Self-Made House Coat Goes to College

Housecoat Is Important Item For Girl Attending College

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

ONE OF THE most important items in the college girls' wardrobe is a comfortable and becoming robe to don for night studying. If she is fashion-wise, she will choose one of the smart housecoats of wool material, because it has chic as well as warmth and comfort. If she is ambitious and thrifty, she will fashion one herself of woolen yarn—it is easily and quickly knitted and has a maximum of style appeal. Also, there are so many attractive new colors in the yarns this fall, the new knitted housecoats are vying with those of flannel and such for popularity.

The newest housecoats follow the silhouette trend of frocks, with their fitted waistlines, long torsos, slender hiplines, smart necklines and novelty belts. Simplicity and conservatism are the requisites for smart college housecoats; conservative chic and well-fitted garments, with careful attention to detail. When trimming is used, it is planned with discretion. Braided frogs lend a swank military touch to the closing of an otherwise simple housecoat. Other decorative features may include deep cuffs of self-material or contrasting fabric; collars of silk on woolen, for effective texture contrast, or suede belts for a dressy look. All these leand interest to what might otheerwise be a very prosaic garment.

Housecoat sleeves should be long—many of the sleeves feature shoulder detail. Necklines vary from high with small collars to V and revere-type models. The skirts of the latest housecoats flare from about the knees down; the smartest length is to the ankle or a bit below. Many of the smartest housecoats this fall are equipped with zipper closings from the throat to the hemline. If you want to go exclusive in your choice of housecoat, you can choose one with short sleeves, topped with a long-sleeved bolero; trimmed to harmonize with the coat.

This cozy and smart housecoat, here illustrated, of gay wool yarn, may be easily made by the college girl herself. It has all of the new-style details—zipper closing, fitted waistline, flaring hem, flowing sleeves and tiny collar finished with a contrasting wool tie.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

THE NIGHT-TIME sports event is becoming an important factor in fashion. Women used to go to the whist club, or stay at home to catch up with the mending, when father went to a prize-fight. Nowadays newspapers send their best style sleuths and picture snatchers to cover these events, for feminine society turns up big and beautifully dressed. Not only prizefights, but baseball and night-time horse racing are beginning to claim feminine as well as male audiences. Moonlight tennis has been tried, too, and has been found practical and picturesque. Unquestionably there is a spell upon night-time events, which the daytime lacks. Any who have ever flown in an airplane at night know how much more thrilling it is than by day.

ALICE HUGHES.

For such a night-time event as the recent Louis-Farr fight, which dragged our gentry out to the Yankee Stadium on a night sparse of air and dubious as to downpour, the type of clothes worn was not quite sportswear, nor was it dinner togs, or evening attire. The smartest dressers wore something approximating a simple afternoon dress. Often it was black; occasionally a light or print fabric. But one detail was hardly ever lacking—the flashing diamond brooch, the bigger and brighter the better. Diamonds do their best sparkling under incandescent lights, and how the girls who frequent these night-time sports events know it!

• • • •

A girl who proved "different" at the Louis-Farr fight was Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, who wore a tailored shirtwaist dress and dared to go entirely hatless. Goodness know there are enough crowns still out of hats to give women plenty of air on their heads; but the former Sylvia Ashley's sleek auburn bob, long to the shoulders, was without benefit of so much as a headband. The following morning we were seeing Walter Dorwin Teague, the industrial designer for the New York World's Fair, together with the new Mrs. Teague, off on the Normandie for a Paris honeymoon. And there was Mrs. Fairbanks, also sailing, still hatless. I guess she just doesn't like hats.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—"Park avenue madonnas" is the name Marjorie Castle, our London-New York stylist, calls the women who stroll down the street with those large halo hats framing the tops of their heads like modern stained-glass window saints.

Child May Eat His Spinach, But Don't Worry if He Doesn't Experts Agree Much-Discussed Vegetable Is Valuable in Diet, but Only as One Type of Green Food.

By Jean Green.

WITH the advent of the spinach season, the question arises of whether or not Junior should be made to eat spinach. The value of spinach has been tooted to the skies, yet certain dietitians are beginning to question whether its importance has not been overdrawn. Parents are interested in knowing to what extent spinach should figure in the child's diet.

For information on this subject, I turned first to the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Here are some of the new slants of this subject:

Miss Miriam Birdseye, extension nutritionist, is a strong advocate of spinach as well as of all greens for everyone. She has been promoting in rural areas a yearly food plan in which all types of greens, including wild greens, are featured. Her list of greens includes cress, dandelion, spinach, kale, chard, beet tops, mustard greens, lettuce, with spinach only one "best seller."

JEAN GREEN.

Spinach has been advocated for its mineral content. On this subject Miss Ruth Van Deman, publicity director of the Bureau of Home Economics, was of great help. She cited an experiment that had been carried out in the department some time ago. Seven mature women were used in the dietary experiment. The diet the first week had milk as the only source of calcium. The second week the same amount of calcium was supplied by spinach and cream. The results showed that while calcium of spinach was stored by the body, yet as a source of calcium the spinach was not as valuable as milk. Miss Van Deman also pointed out that the way in which spinach was cooked affected its mineral and vitamin contents. If it is over-cooked certain vitamins are oxidized and their potency is destroyed. The mineral loss is greater when a large quantity of water is used.

Miss Mildred Parker, chief dietitian of St. Elizabeth's Hospital and past president of the District American Dietetics Association, believes that the value of spinach has been greatly overrated. She points out the theory of iron value of spinach has been exploded. It seems that less than one-half of the high iron content is available to the body. This means that in order to supply the nourishment needs of the child in spinach the diet must include a great amount of this vegetable.

She does, however, believe spinach has a place in the diet, as it furnishes bulk, has calcium, phosphorus, copper, vitamins, and, of course, a green color to supply menu variety.

So the conclusion seems to be that the era of "eat your spinach or else" has passed. The vegetable probably has been overrated, but it still has value. While the spinach season is at its height, do have it. However, don't let the child get a dislike for it by making him eat too much.

The importance of proper cooking has been emphasized. The greatest amount of minerals and vitamins are preserved when cooking time is short and little water is used. A good method for cooking is to cut or clip the leaves, wash well in water several times, and cook in a heavy pan with no additional water. Cover and steam for nine minutes. The color will be rich and deep, the texture tender but not mushy and the taste good. Vary the method of preparation from time to time by having a spinach souffle or chopped spinach in rich cream sauce.

You may win first prize on any type whether it be the school lunch, picnic or afternoon tea variety. Just write out directions for making and mail to Miss Jean Green, Food Editor, The Washington Post, to reach her before noon September 11.

Stephens College Tries New Policy

Trained personnel workers have supplanted the traditional dean of women, house mothers and chaperons at Stephens Junior College, Columbia, Mo., according to an announcement by James M. Wood, president of the college.

The new resident advisers, all college graduates with masters' degrees in personnel methods, have much the same intellectual background as the faculty members. President Wood believes this system will do more to gain the girls' confidence and co-operation than the former dean-proctor system.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Banana in Morning and Tea in Afternoon Reduce Hunger.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT'S NIP AND TUCK between appetite and will power for the first few meals of slimming. At this point, reducing is seven-tenths will power and three-tenths diet. As you go along, the ratio tends to become more comfortable.

Even in starvation, it's a physiological fact that one does not suffer after the third day—and you are by no means starving. In much the same way, the hunger pangs from dieting grow dull after the third day.

I don't have to ask how you like Eve's menu! Of course, you're hungry, and if you haven't lost a pound, you're discouraged. But give yourself a chance! Stay with the diet today, and the scales will register at least a pound less tomorrow morning. That's a contract.

In the meantime, you're so hungry! You can't help being hungry. In terms of calories, these fruit and vegetable menus furnish you with about one-third the food you are accustomed to getting. And how this hurts. Take a banana in the middle of the morning and a cup of hot tea in the middle of the afternoon—that will help some. And, remember, tomorrow will be easier than today.

Your appetite is as elastic as your tummy, and that accommodating organ can expend or contract to a capacity that fits your food intake. The capacious tummy and the husky appetite are the direct result of habitually large food consumption. By getting used to less food, as the fruit regime helps you to do, the size of the stomach is reduced and you want food less.

If too hungry, take a cup of tea in the afternoon.

After two or three days on these menus you will feel almost well-fed on the 1,000-calory dietary which completes the first week of your fall reducing program. After this week you will go on the 1,200-calory daily allowance that will enable you to lose a steady 2 pounds per week.

The 1,000-calory diet provides the meat and bread that have left the greatest gap in the regime. By this time, also, you should have a good grip on your appetite. Best of all, you may lose from 3 to 5 pounds this first week, which is all the encouragement you need. The fruit menus will leave you with a stronger will power and a weaker appetite, making your battle with the pounds a more equal one.

Do not follow these menus for longer than three days, if you lose more than 4 pounds at the end of two days, go on the 1,000-calory allowance the third day.

SECOND DAY—FRUIT, VEGETABLE AND SKIM MILK REGIME.

Society Here Attracted to Polo Classic

Many From Washington to See Matches at Meadow Brook.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Polo with an international accent is scheduled to be the biggest drawing event of the sporting society world on Saturday when the National Open championship games get under way at Meadowbrook, Long Island.

With the Argentine team—stars at the Berlin Olympics—as the chief attraction, polo enthusiasts from all over the East will flock to Meadowbrook to see whether the United States can hold its own against the South American champions.

Our team didn't last year, you remember. Following the Olympics, the Argentines came on to this country to participate in the international matches for the Cup of the Americas and won two straight games and the cup from the U. S. open champions. The latter had been holders of the treasured trophy since winning it in 1932 in Buenos Aires.

George Bostwick Is in Line-Up.

George H. Bostwick, better known in Washington as "Pete" Bostwick, son-in-law of Mrs. James F. Curtis, is in the line-up of the Greentree Team, the defending champions, which also includes John Hay Whitney, Thomas Hitchcock, jr., and Gerald Baldwin, the latter of whom last year was a member of the British team, runner-up for the International Polo Challenge Cup.

One of America's outstanding polo players, fans and promoters, Mr. Bostwick, has stimulated interest in his favorite game by offering the public first-rate polo at popular prices each week at Bostwick Field on his Long Island estate. The Bostwicks—she was formerly Laura Curtis—are frequent visitors in Washington when Mrs. Bostwick's mother is here.

According to reports the demand for boxes this year is far greater than it was before the first game last year. A number of persons widely known in Washington will be on hand to watch the thrilling matches from ringside seats.

Record Crowd Expected at Matches.

From the Capital and the hunt country, from summer colonies, from all over the country a record crowd is expected to attend. A number of Washingtonians will probably stop in Long Island on their way back to these parts from New England beach and mountain resorts where they have been the past three months.

With the large number of players from Great Britain and South America, it is probable many diplomats will attend. Chances are, the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, who have received special invitations to be there, will go from their summer home at Narragansett Pier, R. I., to watch their countrymen defend the coveted title. The Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler, has already made definite plans to be there, and other members of the Embassy staff may decide later this week to go.

Many persons widely known in Washington, either as residents, former residents or frequent visitors, are boxholders—among them the Bostwicks and Mrs. Curtis, who has been spending the summer in her Roslyn, Long Island, home and will return to the Capital shortly; Mr. and Mrs. Averill Harriman, the former of whom was a member of the Industrial Advisory Board of the NRA; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Metcalf, who visited here often when Mr. Metcalf's father was Senator from Rhode Island; Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan, parents-in-law of the former Hope Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Talbott and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Bride Attended By Her Sisters.

Palms, ferns and white gladioli decorated the church and tapers burned on the altar. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown with a standing collar of lace and a fingertip tulle veil. She carried gardenias, roses and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendants were her two sisters, Miss Jeanne Spaulding, who served as maid of honor, and Miss Cecil Caylor Spaulding, the junior bridesmaid. The former wore a frock of peach satin trimmed with blue and carried Johanna Hill roses, and the latter chose blue satin trimmed with pink velvet and carried a nosegay of pink roses.

Move to Wardman.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo O. Bliss have moved to the Wardman Park Hotel, where they have taken an apartment for several weeks.

ABOUT THE TOWN

With Dudley Harmon.

One somehow expects that immediately after Labor Day summer will be turned off like a faucet, and that "everybody" will automatically be back in town again ready for the fall season. It's something of an anti-climax to note that the streets still seem rather deserted, and that most of the houses on Massachusetts avenue are still boarded up for the summer.

This year membrs of Washington society are staying away from the Capital in droves until late in the fall. Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe is not expected from Newport until sometime in November, and another late-season lingerer is Mrs. Henry Leonard, who, with Maj. Leonard, will not leave their Colorado ranch until mid-October.

Mrs. John W. Guider plans to be at her home in Littleton, N. H., until early next month. Most summer resorts seem a bit bleak this late in the season, but not Littleton and other places in New England, which are at their most beautiful. The flaming maples and gorgeously colored leaves of other trees are famous all over the world, and countless diplomats who come here have made it a point to travel to New England to see them at this time. In their countries they have heard almost as much about our celebrated autumn foliage as they have about Niagara Falls.

• • • •

NEVERTHELESS, people are beginning to trickle back into town by degrees. Mrs. Ralph McDowell is again at her home on New Hampshire avenue after a trip to the West Coast, during which she visited her sister, Mrs. Smith Hempstone, who has been residing in California since Commander Hempstone was transferred there last year from Newport.

September 15 will see Justice and Mrs. Lawrence Groner back at their home in Washington after a summer at the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, where they entertained frequently. Mrs. Groner's daughters, the Misses Elizabeth and Marian Shouse, are still traipsing through Europe.

• • • •

"I'VE HARDLY SEEN my fiance since our engagement was announced," said Frances Montague Hill yesterday. Her future husband Capt. Edward Colston Dyer, United States Marine Corps, is busy studying for exams in the post graduate course he's been taking at Annapolis.

For this reason, Miss Hill and Capt. Dyer will miss the usual round of pre-wedding parties. The only one it has been possible to sandwich in is a cocktail party at which Mrs. Bowman McArthur and Mrs. William Dudley will entertain tomorrow afternoon in Alexandria. They will be attendants at Miss Hill's wedding on Saturday at the Rappahannock estate of Mrs. George Barnett, aunt of the bride-to-be.

• • • •

THERE'S A NEW game which is pleasantly agitating members of society, and for once, it is not an invention of Elsa Maxwell. A big pail filled with water is placed in the middle of the floor, and in the pail is a small cup. The object is to toss dimes in and try to get them into the cup, the winner taking the "pot." It's much more difficult than it sounds.

One victorious lady came home with 178 dimes from one of these games, and paid her bills for several days with great handfuls of the coins.

Miss Hey Wed To H. P. Murray

The wedding of Miss Verna Minnie Hey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hey, of Arlington, Va., and Herndon Paul Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander G. Murray, of Wilson boulevard, Arlington, took place at 8 o'clock last evening in St. George's Episcopal Church, Arlington, with the rector the Rev. Henry J. Miller, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white lace gown over white satin, made on princess lines, with a short jacket. The latter had long, close-fitting sleeves, and was held at the neckline by a cameo pin, which had also been worn by the bride's paternal grandmother. Her tulle veil was fingertip length, made cap shape and held by orange blossoms.

The matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. Joseph J. Mann, who was gowned in ashes of roses lace, with burgandy accessories. With this she wore a turban of burgandy velvet and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses.

David Murray served as his brother's best man, and the ushers were Charles H. Hey, jr., brother of the bride, and Frank Basset.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the wedding, when the mother of the bride was gowned in brown with brown accessories and wore a corsage of talisman roses, while the mother of the bridegroom wore a black and white dress and her flowers were gardenias.

Later the young couple left by motor for a wedding trip through the New England States. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Murray will reside in the Colonial Village.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. William Moon, of Philadelphia, aunt of the bride, and other relatives from nearby Virginia and Washington.

War Mothers' Leader Urges Teaching Ideals

Mrs. H. C. Boone Says Instilling American Principles in Youth Is Best Way to Combat Alien Propaganda.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

American youth must be taught to cherish and uphold American ideals; it is one of the greatest needs of the country as a means of combatting insidious propaganda designed to undermine the foundations on which the Nation is built, Mrs. Howard C. Boone, president of the American Mothers, says.

Mrs. Boone, who has returned to the national headquarters of the organization after attending the dedication of war memorials in France and Belgium as a member of the official delegation to the ceremonies, plans to stress this as one of the chief objectives of the War Mothers for the coming year. She plunged into the midst of preparations for the annual convention in Detroit, September 28 to October 2, immediately on reaching home.

The second objective of the organization will be one which is always of prime importance in its program, that of aiding former service men and their families. "The public may forget the sacrifices of the men in the World War, but the mothers never will," said Mrs. Boone. They continue their interest and regularly visit the disabled veterans, take them literature and cigarettes and remember them with gifts at Christmas and on other special occasions.

Senator Lee Is Speaker.

Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, will address the convention at its session the evening of September 30. Another speaker on the program is to be Charles Tietz, of Illinois, winner of the medal given by Mrs. Boone in memory of her son to the member of the C. M. T. C. at Fort Sheridan, who writes the prize-winning essay on "What the C. M. T. C. Means to Me."

The Constitution Tree will be planted at Belle Isle Park in observance of the sesquicentennial and there also will be a tree planted in tribute to Mrs. Boone, as president of the War Mothers. One of the features of the convention will be a tea given in honor of the delegates in Windsor, Canada, by the Canadian War Mothers, on September 29.

Others from Washington besides Mrs. Boone who will be in Detroit for the convention include Mrs. Florence A. Latham, national corresponding secretary; Mrs Amelia Thiele, district president; Mrs. Mary T. Shanahan, national custodian of records; Mrs. Elizabeth Roddy, president of the District of Columbia chapter; Mrs. Walter Criswell, delegate, and Mrs. George S. Carll, from the D. C. chapter, and Mrs. Sophia Pearce, of the Admiral Coontz Chapter.

Had Full Program At Memorials.

In Europe, with the delegation headed by Gen. Pershing, chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission, the president of the War Mothers made the pilgrimage to the nine memorials and two chapels which were dedicated to the memory of the American men who gave their lives during the World War. She and Mrs. Henry F. Baker, of Baltimore, only woman member of the commission, on August 10, held a little ceremony of their own at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The national service flag of the American War Mothers was carried by a member of the Paris post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars on the day of the official ceremony conducted at the tomb, when the entire commission was present, and placed a wreath there.

In addition to attending the dedicatory ceremonies, members of the commission were entertained at receptions given by the President of France and Ambassador Bullitt, and received official honors wherever they went.

Milton Smiths Return Oct. 1

Bride Was Former Miss Dorothy S. Davidson, of Arlington.

Now on a wedding trip to Ocean City, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Milton Albert Smith, who were married August 28, will return to Washington after October 1 and make their home at 3010 Wisconsin avenue.

The bride was the former Miss Dorothy Steele Davidson, daughter of Mrs. Mary Waite Davidson, of Colonial Village, Arlington, Va. The bridegroom is the son of Capt. Milton D. Smith, of the Washington traffic bureau.

Miss Elizabeth Walte, of Gainesville, Ga., cousin of the bride, and her maid of honor, wore peach mousseline de soie, made with full skirt and puffed sleeves. Mrs. William L. Simmons, of Chevy Chase, matron of honor, appeared in a dress of turquoise blue, styled on princess lines. Both attendants wore lace mitts to match their gowns and their arm bouquets were of old-fashined garden flowers, tied with rainbow ribbons.

Charles McCadden, of Washington, was best man, and the ushers were John Carlos Davidson, brother of the bride; Howard Roth and Hayden Evans, of Washington.

Mrs. Smith's traveling costume was a silk crepe dress in coffee-bean brown, with which she wore accessories to match, and a green cloth coat.

The bride is a graduate of Central High School and attended George Washington University. She is a member of the Adelphian Sorority. The bridegroom attended George Washington University and is a student at the Washington College of Law. For several years he has been a member of the speakers' bureau of the Community Chest of Washington. He is a member of the Kenwood Country Club.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

MRS. FRANK A. LINZEL, president of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches, has called a meeting of the administrative committee for Friday to plan the council's program for the coming year. The meeting will be held in the new headquarters of the Federation of Churches, 1749 N street, which has not yet been formally opened.

The juvenile court department of the Women's Council, of which Mrs. J. T. Howerton is chairman, probably is the best known because of the outstanding social service work done with the aid of Miss Etta Mai Russell, whom it employes with an office at the Juvenile Court building.

There are other active departments, however: Missionary education, which devotes its program to "a study understanding of those less privileged," with Mrs. F. E. Edgington, chairman; better citizenship, whose purpose is "a constructive approach to civic problems," with Mrs. G. C. D. Townshend chairman; international relations, whose aim is stated as "primarily an endeavor to make an effective contribution toward the cause of world peace," with Mrs. W. L. Darby chairman, and foreign students, which is concerned with extending the hand of fellowship to young people from foreign lands who come to Washington to study. The latter department is headed by Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray, wife of the chancellor of American University.

Miss Bagley At Meeting Of Council

Few in Town as First Event of the Season Is Held.

Miss Ethel Bagley, the president, was present last night to preside at the first meeting of the season of the Business Women's Council at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. She and her sister, Miss Belle Bagley, also a member of the council, have been visiting in North Carolina with another sister, Mrs. Josephus Daniels, who was there for the summer, and returned home yesterday afternoon just in time to attend the council's opening session.

Miss Bagley has been president of the business women's group since 1918, when it was organized during Billy Sunday's evangelistic campaign in the Capital. It has a membership of 200, but last night's meeting brought together only a small number of members, as many are still away on vacations or busy with preparations to take them.

Miss Ethel M. Martin, first vice president, is preparing to leave Friday for a trip through Pennsylvania and New York State. Miss Elizabeth Groves, chairman of the home missionary committee, is leaving for a visit in Delaware; Miss Helen Childs, another active member, is now at Manchester, Vt., and Miss Ruth Boyer, newly elected first vice president, is at Lake Sunape, N. H.

The program last night was in charge of Miss Edith Stiles, who led the 8 o'clock period devoted to an informal account of vacation experiences. Miss Louise Newell, who has recently returned from Chambia, Pa., was one of those who contributed to it. Miss Newell also led the prayer circle at 5:30 with which the meeting opened. The period on current topics was led by Miss Mary Wild.

The devotional service was conducted by the Rev. Samuel R. Allison, assistant pastor of the church, who leaves the end of this month for a year's study in Edinburgh, Scotland. He has been especially active in work with the young people of the church during his ministry there. Music for the service was in charge of Miss Fannie Buck.

The council's customary supper was omitted last evening as the church is undergoing repairs and facilities for serving it will not be available until the first of October.

The council plans a membership campaign preceding its get-together dinner the last of next month. Its installation of officers will be conducted on October 5.

14th and F Sts. Will Stay Open During Repairs

New Switch to Be Installed for Street Car Service.

A plan for keeping Fourteenth and F street partially open while the Capital Transit Co. installs a new switch was worked out yesterday at a conference of District and traction officials after a strong protest had been received from F street merchants.

Signs will be put up and special policemen will be assigned to F street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets to direct traffic, as ordinary bans on U turns and left and right turns will be waived.

The partial closing will begin this week and be spread over three or four weeks.

Following the conference Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and Dan I. Sultan explained that the following traffic routing will be observed during the switch installation:

Through north-bound traffic from Pennsylvania avenue into Fourteenth street will be prohibited, but vehicles will be permitted to go up to F street and turn east on F.

South-bound traffic on Fourteenth will remain open.

West-bound traffic on F street will be halted at Fourteenth street, but U-turns will be permitted between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

East-bound traffic on F street will be allowed most of the time and all during theater hours. A bridge will be built over the tracks at Fourteenth.

Traction official, it is understood, were told that they must expedite the work and that traffic obstructions would have to be kept at a minimum.

The conference followed a telegraphic protest from Carter Barron, Loew's theater executive, threatening "judicial relief" if F street were to be closed completely during the track repair.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"Since I had 'em all fingerprinted I ain't missed a dime outa my pants."

"Over the Coffee," Harlan Miller's daily comment on Washington and Washingtonians, appears today on page 1, section 2.

Cost of Imprisoning Kidnaper Often Equals Ransom Demand

Department of Justice Spent Minimum of $28,543 in O'Connell Case; Mattson Tragedy Alone Unsolved of 100 Crimes.

The cost of putting a kidnaper behind bars sometimes equals the ransom figure demanded by the criminal, the Justice Department calculated yesterday.

"There is no way of computing exactly what it costs when we catch and convict a kidnaper, but it frequently runs into thousands of dollars and in some cases into five or six figures," a Department official said.

The O'Connell kidnaping case, which ended August 12 with the sentencing of seven defendants at Binghampton, N. Y., cost a minimum of $28,543, he estimated. This, however, he added, does not include the salaries of agents, judge, marshal, deputies, bailiffs and clerks. Neither does it take into account allocation for overhead, nor compensation for the United States prosecuting attorney and his staff of assistants.

Due to the number of agents engaged on a single case, salaries for personnel constitute a major item alone, it was explained.

Only one out of 100 kidnapings remains unsolved since the Federal kidnaping act became law in June, 1932, records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation show. That is the case of Charles Mattson, 10-year-old son of a wealthy Tacoma, Wash., physician. Kidnaped from his home December 26, the child's body was found in a thicket several days later.

'Wee One' Last to Arrive After Riding Out Storm on Chesapeake.

The last of three sailing vessels, thought to have been lost in Chesapeake Bay, was back at Gibson Island yesterday after riding out a squall that raged Sunday and Monday along the Atlantic seaboard.

The yacht was the Wee One, owned by Harry Young, of Baltimore, and because of its size fears had been expressed for its safety. It was learned upon its return that it rode out the storm in a cove.

Earlier, the Coast Guard cutters Apache and Pamlico aided in an all-day search for two other racing boats—the Bensark II, owned by Benjamin C. Howard, jr., and the Mary, owned by O. I. Tiedman, both of Baltimore.

The three boats were part of the fleet of privately owned sloops which took part in the annual 100-mile race to the Cedar Point gas buoy from theier berths at the Gibson Island Yacht Club.

Among other craft which were blown ashore or so badly buffeted they had to be towed in were the Aloha, of Baltimore, and the Felice, a Philadelphia yacht. The Coast Guard freed the former from a sand bar off Persimmon Point and towed the latter to Ocean City, Md., after the northeaster had driven it from Atlantic City to Fenwick Island.

Cleveland Airman Survives to Relate Maryland Crackup

Smithburg, Md., Sept. 7 (AP).—Jack Oettinger, youthful Cleveland pilot crashed in his airplane in fog-shrouded moutains of western Maryland today but escaped severe injury.

"I think I've got a bad rib—I haven't been to a doctor yet," he said. "But I have a mighty black eye and a bunged up nose."

"I just didn't have enough ceiling; I thought I could get over the mountain but I couldn't. If I'd had about 50 feet more I'd have made it." He was en route from Cleveland to Wilson, N. C.

Oettinger is the nephew of Mrs. B. A. Oettinger, 3601 Connecticut avenue northwest, and is well known in Washington. He was to have spent last night at Mrs. Oettinger's home.

G. A. R. Leader Renews Battle On Joint Reunion With Rebels

Declares 'Enemy' Stars and Bars Must Not Fly at Gettysburg Celebration; Veterans to Vote on Proposals.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 7.—The Grand Army of the Republic decorated graves of both Union and Confederate soldiers today but reserved for a secret vote the question of joining surviving Southern soldiers in a Blue-Gray reunion at Gettysburg, Pa., next year.

C. H. William Ruhe, of Pittsburgh, G. A. R. commander, has objected to plans of the United Confederate Veterans to unfurl their Stars and Bars at the reunion.

"There is only one flag in this Union," Ruhe said. "We cannot permit the enemy flag to be displayed."

Paul L. Roy, of Gettysburg, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Commission in charge of the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the Battle of Gettysburg, said more than 2,000 G. A. R. members have accepted invitations to the fete, to be held next June 26 to July 6.

The G. A. R. veterans made a pilgrimage today to Camp Pandall, Civil War training camp which is now a University of Wisconsin athletic center. Marvin Gratten, of Marshalltown, Iowa, for the fifty-sixth year delivered Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

8 More Executed In Soviet Purge

Moscow, Sept. 7 (AP).—Eight regional officials in the Ukraine and Azov districts died before firing squads today, convicted as "wreckers" in the Soviet agricultural program.

A provincial newspaper reported four were executed at Gaisin and the others at Salysk. Nine also were sentenced at Salysk to prison terms. They were convicted of spreading foot and mouth disease by allowing diseased cattle to mingle with healthy stock.

The Soviet's traitor purge also was extending to the Buryat republic on the Mongolian frontier, where it was charged Japanese agents were influencing "bourgeois nationalists."

Herbert Concealed Truth, Blonde Says

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (AP).—Blonde Lillian Kinsinger testified today she accepted the love of Clifford V. Herbert, son of Victor Herbert, on his promise of marriage, only to learn several weeks later he was an undivorced husband.

Testifying in her $50,000 breach of promise suit against the son of the late composer, Miss Kinsinger said Herbert wooed her on an ocean voyage to Seattle and Vancouver, British Columbia, in July, 1936.

He said he had been divorced three years before and settled $100,000 on his former wife, she declared. She told of "ardent love" which swept her off her feet.

Mgr. Quirk, 92, Ill, At Sand Fork, W. Va.

Weston, W. Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—Pneumonia, brought on by exposure to a heavy rain, tonight threatened the little father of the mountains—Mgr. Thomas Aquinas Quirk, 92.

Grave fears were felt for the aged priest, who became ill when he collapsed in the garden of St. Bernard's Church parish house at Sand Fork, Gilmer County, and lay for some time in the rain.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—The National Maritime Union, C. I. $37,000 Winnings Of Baccarat 'King' Whittled to $7.50

For a while it looked like the Uruguayan was well on his way toward getting back those 27,000,000 francs (about $1,024,000) which he asserted the big-time players took from him in 1929.

Banking the "big table" in his comeback game, he jubilantly announced yesterday he was 1,000,000 francs (about $37,000) ahead. But today his opponents trimmed his winnings down to a meager 200 francs (less than $7.50) and he was virtually back where he started.

Girl and Escort Die In 240-Foot Plunge

Plymouth, Mich., Sept. 7 (AP).—Hilda Williams, 20, Plymouth waitress, and her escort, Michael Schlemmer, 47, of Chicago, were killed today when they fell from the top of a 240-foot chimney being built here.

Police said Schlemmer, foreman of a crew constructing the chimney, had taken Miss Williams to the top of the stack in a hoist bucket. They believe Miss Williams lost her balance and Schlemmer fell trying to catch her.

Douglas Blames Labor For Plane Plant's Close

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (AP).—Donald W. Douglas, president of the Douglas Aircraft Corporation, Inc., said today he has permanently closed the Northrop Aircraft Plant, a subsidiary.

He said the action, which followed the strike of United Automobile Workers of America, was necessary "because of failure of the C. I. O. and labor bodies to respect agreements made regarding working conditions."

Army Junta Rules Over Paraguay as Coup Evicts Paiva

Asuncion, Paraguay, Sept. 7 (U.P.). An army triumvirate ruled Paraguay tonight after Asuncion garrisons revolted against the 23-day-old government of Provisional President Felix Paiva and demanded the return to power of Col. Rafael Franco, Chaco war hero.

The military junta was formed by Franco, who has been in Buenos Aires since shortly after his overthrow by an army and navy group August 15; Col. Federico Smith, an Anglo-Paraguayan cavalry officer, and Col. Juan B. Ayala.

The navy did not participate in the movement, which began shortly after dawn, when the provisional government was served with a demand for immediate resignation. Troops had been posted secretly in strategic parts of the city during the night. As day broke they began to take over control of different parts of the capital. A parley was arranged, and there was no fighting.

It was believed the uprising was caused chiefly by army discontent with the return of exiled Liberal and National Republican leaders.

'Atta cop! . . . sending people right where you should—here to my station. Because the only real official Mileage Merchant is a CONOCO Mileage Merchant like me. I sure appreciate half a dozen cars from different states driving in this morning already. But let me tell you. Being in business for myself here, my surest living is from always pleasing the homefolks. And they're just as sold as any long distance tourist, on having the engine Oil-Plated by my Conoco Germ Processed oil. You know the way Oil-Plating is altogether different from anything else. It holds on like a leech, where all the worst wear used to come in the engine. Can't drain off the working parts. Then it can't leave any spots without oil . . . not even while the car is standing still . . . nor all the while it's spinning along on the hottest day. This Oil-Plating is really like a long-lasting part of the engine. Then where's any chance for too much wear, or needing more oil all the time? And there you are . . . people notice all their mileage and the way the engine keeps quiet and cool from Oil-Plating. That's how I've got them picking me out for their Mileage Merchant.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Returning travelers assert that, far from squirting champagne in the eye of the Mayor of Cannes, France, one of young John Roosevelt's companions merely offered him a drink, in a good-neighborly way.

* * * *

On a visit to Berlin last fall I jumped at the conclusion that more airplanes fly over that capital than any in the world, because Templehof Airdrome is in the heart of town . . . But now I think more airplanes fly over Washington than any city in the world, and several seem to want to fly in my bedroom window at 4 a. m.

* * * *

It isn't merely showing friends from home the sights of Washington that frazzles the Capital's statesmen and officials; it's the more serious matter of histing drink for drink with 'em . . . One Senator complains that some of his constituents who never touch a drop at home relax considerably here.

* * * *

"—government with a Dixie drawl"

* * * *

One of Washington's most entrancing traits is its unhurried calm; no one seems to entertain the silly notion that everything must be done by 4 o'clock this afternoon . . . I hope the Northern carpetbaggers never impose their haste on the town.

* * * *

But I can't help wondering whether it's the town which has imbued the Government offices with this delightful leisureliness, or whether the Government has thus left its imprint on the town.

* * * *

What an excellent occasion Labor Day might have been for the President to say something in praise of work! . . . One odd thing about some of Washington's French restaurants is that you seldom see a Frenchman in them.

* * * *

Both of the President's secretaries, Marvin McIntyre and Steve Early, are Southerners—Kentucky and Virginia; both are veteran journalists; both flirted with the movies (as diplomats, not actors); both were Roosevelt campaigners, and both belong to Burning Tree, that most elite of golf clubs.

* * * *

Quite a few of the foreign diplomats stationed here know more about our Republic than does a well-informed American. (This is in the tradition of Bryce, Spring-Rice and Jusserand.) . . . They like to dash hither and yon to places that fashionable Easterners seldom visit; and they read books, newspapers and magazines tirelessly . . . After all, it's their job to find out about us, to see we don't put anything over on them. (As if we would, or could!)

"—champagne offered, not squirted"

The oratory may be livelier in the Senate next year; Alabama's Tom Heflin was in town the other day looking over his old stamping grounds, and lunched with some newspaper writers, pink, moon-faced and very sartorial . . . Which would you prefer in the Senate, Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves or Mr. Heflin?

* * * *

Potomac piffle: Some of the most respectable liquor you drink in the best Washington homes is imported under an exclusive contract by cagy capitalists of Manhattan's demimond, and sold by chaste front-men with cathedral dignity . . . A pretty brunette argued for ten minutes because the counterman put only one slice of cheese in her toasted cheese sandwich; he was adamant, arguing that the chain-store regulations said one slice . . . A young lawyer from the open spaces who knows the ins and outs of the income tax laws has been earning $75,000 his bad years, and has built himself a $200,000 mansion in Washington.

* * * *

One of those things the New Deal has to contend with is that among its adversaries are big-jawed men who began with nothing and piled up fortunes, while their jaws grew bigger and bigger; the type that doesn't give up easily, even when it might be pleasanter to give up . . . If the consumers stage a strike, I wonder if they can go on relief, too?

School Cost Here $61 and Up Per Child

Education Cost Shows Decline From Last Session.

80 Crippled Children Are Transferred to Safer Buildings.

Parents of the District of Columbia won't have to pay it, but Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, announced yesterday that education in Washington public schools is to be had this year at $61.44 and up per child.

The figures, Dr. Ballou, told members of the Board of Education, represent the cost of educating puplis in our schools, and will be used in establishing tuition rates for out-of-town pupils. The superintendent expained, however, that they will not apply to non-resident pupils, who as a result of a recent court ruling may attend District schools free. Non-resident pupils are children of parents employed in the District of Columbia.

Most Figures Decline.

Costs were listed as follows: Teachers' colleges, $250.36; senior high schools, $113.84; junior high schools, $85; elementary schools, $61.44; vocational schools, $113.10. These rates, Dr. Ballou said, include costs of textbooks and school supplies as well as of tuition.

Nearly all of the new figures are under corresponding rates for last year. Teachers college costs per pupil were reduced from $252.49; senior high costs from $114.15, and junior high rates from $87.32. Elementary rates showed an increase from $59.83, and the vocational schools, now given a junior high status, raised their costs nearly $6, last year's being $107.52.

Washington's 80 crippled pupils, formerly housed in the condemned Weightman and Magruder schools, will attend classes this year in safer buildings—the Langdon and Anthony Bowen Schools—the board decided.

New Building Needed.

Both schools are comparatively new, and are as conveniently located as the schools formerly occupied by the physically handicapped classes, said Superintendent Ballou, who recommended the transfer.

Weightman and Magruder schools were both condemned by the Fire Department last summer.

"This transfer does not mean that we will not continue our efforts to obtain an altogether new and fully equipped building for these special groups," declared Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board.

Fire hazards also prompt the evacuation of parts of three other schools, Dr. Ballou said. The third floor of Force School will be vacated because of lack of fire escapes. For the same reason the third floor of Grant School will be kept empty and certain rooms in the upper story of Wilson Teachers College. New fire regulations make these steps necessary at this time, the superintendent said.

Dr. Ballou announced the discontinuance of the Bates Road Portable School, effective this month.

D. C. Thieves Turn To Odds and Ends For Tuesday's Loot

Stolen: Three pounds of salomi, 800 cigaretts, 3,417 feet of copper wire, 32 pounds of butter and 200 pennies.

These were some of the thefts reported to police yesterday.

Pennsylvania Railroad police reported the spool of wire, weighing more than a ton, and worth $438, was stolen from a freight car in the Jersey yards, near Virginia avenue southeast.

Bandits sawed through the iron grilling of a window of a bakery at 1516 Seventh street and got the pennies.

It's Cheaper to Take a Sawmill to the Trees, Says Veteran of Industry

U. S. Executive Pay Roll Drops 15,243 in July

Agriculture, War Departments Report Fewer Employes.

Employes in the executive branch of the Government were decreased by 15,243 during July, with the Department of Agriculture and the War Department leading in the number of workers lost, according to a report made yesterday by the United States Civil Service Commission.

The July pay roll was $127,177,428, as compared to $128,334,128 in June, a decline of more than $1,100,000.

The Postoffice Department and Social Security Board, however, added employes during the month—the former 3,009 and the latter 1,081.

Substitutes Hired.

"The increase in the Postoffice Department was caused primarily by additional substitute employes taking the places of regular employes who were on vacation, and the increase in the Social Security Board was caused by the addition of temporary employes made necessary by transfer of certain functions connected with the administration of the social security act from the Postoffice Department to the board," the report stated.

The decrease in employment in the District of Coumbia was 818, leaving the number of government executive branch employes in the District 111,301. The total outside the District is 743,616.

Decrease Is Listed.

The following "significant decreases" were listed: Department of Agriculture, 7,844; War Department, 4,022; Treasury Department, 2,000; Department of the Interior, 1,780; WPA, 1,772, and Department of Labor, 935.

"The primary reasons for decreases in these agencies were a decrease in the amount of emergency funds available for administrative employes, as compared with the month of June, and the termination of a large amount of temporary work which began near the end of the fiscal year. A delay in budget allotments was a factor contributing to the decrease in employment in the War Department."

Federal Bar to Resume Weekly Sessions Today

The Federal Bar Association will resume its weekly luncheons today at 12:30 at the Hotel Harrington, W. N. Morell, program committee chairman, said yesterday.

Col. O. A. McGuire, of the Comptroller General's office, will speak on "The Settlement of Disputes with the United States."

Roams Virginia, North Carolina Forests for 40 Years.

The advantage ofa portable sawmill is that when you have cut down and planked al the trees in one vicinity, you can pick it up and move somewhere else. Also, according to William F. Halley, 63-year-old-veteran of the industry, it is cheaper to carry the saw to the trees than to haul the trees to a mill.

So far 40 years he (and more recently his 27-year-old son) has been roaming the forests of Virginia and North Carolina, stopping in one place only long enough to get all the wood there was to get.

Right now William F. Halley & Son are operating in Fairfax County, near Annandale. The property he is clearing belongs to former Senator Joseph L. Briscow, of Kansas, and was once part of Ravensworth, the estate owned by Robert E. Lee's family.

They've Waited 30 Years.

Halley is paid per 1,000 feet of timber which he cuts. He turns the wood over to an agent, who has purchased the right to the trees on the land. He will work the section until he has cut down all the sound trees on it, and then move on.

"These trees were ripe for cutting about 30 years ago," he said in a tone of authority born of experience with lumber. "They're getting rotten, many of them."

He pointed out one trunk which looked like as sturdy a pine as one would find anywhere, and shook his head. "You can tell just by tapping that with the back of your ax that that tree's not sound."

The first thing Halley does after setting up his mill (a circular saw with a roof over it) is to send his woodsman out to test the trees. This is done by shaving off a section of the bark and listening to the sound made by hitting the naked wood. If the tree is solid, Halley and his crew saw it down. If it is rotten, the blaze remains to warn him and future lumbermen that it is not worth their while.

A Six-Man Plant.

The logs are piled on a cart and hauled to the mill by Halley's pet team of horses, which he calls Man and Boy. His son acts as sawyer, supervising the five men who feed the logs into the saw and pile up the planks as they leave it. Afterwards the wood is planed and stacked, ready to be carted away to the purchaser.

Halley's only complaint against his occupation is the constant labor difficulty which he encounters. When a visitor to the mill asks him who is boss, he points to his laborers and says, "See him, and him, and him? They're all the bosses. I'm just the one that pays out."

So acute is the labor shortage in that line of work that Halley's workers can adopt a rather condescending attitude toward their employer with no fear of losing their job. "They've told me they'll quit if I take the social security tax from their wages. So I have to pay their share as well as mine," he says.

They take a day off when they see fit, quit work early if they please and think nothing of getting him out of bed of a Saturday night for their evening's entertainment.

Too Near Heaven.

Halley blames his plight on his proximity to Washington. "We're too near Heaven and the Lord," he complains. "If these men get tired of working they know they can go on relief."

Crew Makes Him Pay for Social Security, Routs Him Out at Night.

A life spent working with his hands has persuaded him of the futility of education. He himself left school after the fifth grade and has no regrets. "And take my son," he added. "He only went through grade school, and he'll always be able to get a job because he can work with wood, build a house, and mend machinery."

Young Halley, unhandicapped by education, is the business manager of the outfit. As he watches the planks sliced off by the saw, he measures their length and thickness—with his eye— and adds the dimensions to the day's total—in his head. This is no small accomplishment, considering that the mill sometimes turns out 7,500 cubic feet of lumber a day.

Until last year Halley used a steam boiler to furnish power for his saw. But the boiler began to get weak and he became afraid to use it. There was also the perpetual risk of fire from the sparks.

Uses Tractor Now.

So he invested in a tractor, the motor of which turns the saw by means of a belt attachment.

"With the boiler I could saw 1,800 feet a day. The tractor will turn out the same amount in 2½ hours," he estimates. In the year he has used the tractor, he has produced 350,000 feet of timber.

Halley knows trees so well that they have become not only his companions but his kin. "We're trees, all of us," he philosophized. "Trees get their growth and begin to decompose, just as we do. Some ripen later than others, like me—63 and only a boy."

3 Seized by Police In Garage Thefts; 1 Admits Shooting

Police also arrested Jacob Feeling, 26, colored, of 1500 Massachusetts avenue southeast, and Richard Simons, 32, 1721 New Jersey avenue northwest.

Police said Feeling confessed he robbed the place with Ferguson eight times, taking about $400 worth of accessories while Simons, according to the officers, confessed he received the goods. Ferguson and Feeling were garage employes.

Drive's Goal Is to Bolster Merit System

Civil Service Amendment Study Authorized by Convention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 7.—Plans for the most intensive membership drive in the history of Federal employe organizations were presented here today to the convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes by Gertrude M. McNally, of Washington, secretary-treasurer.

The campaign is outlined for October, November, and December, and all local unions, State federations, regional federations, and the national headquarters of the N. F. F. E. will participate.

The convention adopted a number of basically important resolutions, the chief of which pledged continuation of the federation's campaign to strengthen and extend the merit system. The resolution declared that the political spoils system is adding $500,000,000 directly to the annual tax bill, and "indirectly probably as much more."

This resolution also authorized the national officers to study a constitutional amendment on civil service.

Delegates voiced demands that all Federal positions except those very definitely of a policy-determining nature be placed under civil service.

On the question of leaves, the convention urged 30 days annual leave with pay each year, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, cumulative to 120 days. If compensatory time can not be given, the employes are to be compensated at the regular rate; 15 days sick leave annually, exclusive of Sundays, legal holidays, and half-holidays, unused portions of the annual allowance to be cumulative to 120 days.

The convention urged a shorter work week and shorter work day without decrease of compensation, favored legislation to provide for overtime pay or compensatory time for overtime, and for work on Sundays, holidays and half holidays.

The delegates also adopted a resolution recommending that the federation "remain individual and distinct and without other affiliations."

However, by committee action N. F. F. E. continues its membership in the national legislative council of Federal employes organizations.

Outspoken support for the merit system in Federal Government and in the State was voiced yesterday afternoon by Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois in an address.

Fugitive Missing Two Years, Bond Forfeiture Likely

Actual forfeiture of Albert Taylor's $2,000 bond will be ordered, at last, attaches of the District Court predicted yesterday, unless the colored fugitive, sought for more than two years for trial on charges of second degree murder and violation of the liquor tax law, is produced in court by September 15. Taylor was in court for two days, when his cases were scheduled to be tried early in 1935. When the case was actually called, he disappeared and has not been heard from since.

Acting on orders of Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, Taylor's cases were called for trial, July 17 and when he failed to respond, bonds were forfeited. At the request of Louis Weinstein, however, Justice O'Donoghue kept the term of court "open" for 30 days so that, in the event Taylor was found, the bond could be returned.

On August 14, Justice James M. Proctor continued the term open for an additional 30 days and that period will elapse in mid-month.

Shoe Store Pickets Fight Injunction

Alleging that a temporary restraining order issued last week to prevent picketing of four shoe repair stores had been granted in violation of the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act with governs the granting of labor disputes, attorneys representing the United Shoe Workers of America yesterday filed a motion in District Court to vacate the order.

The attorneys, Samuel Levine and Sidney Schlesinger, contended the controversy was a "labor matter" and as such should not be acted upon in any court without both sides being represented.

Hyman and David Zoslow, owners of the stores, and the Washington Shoe Workers Union obtained the injunction last Thursday. They contended their employes had been granted a contract and all had resigned from the United Shoe Workers' group, which is a C. I. O. affiliate.

Mitchell was struck down by the blast as he stood in an alley in the 1800 block of Fourteenth street northwest. One pellet entered his face and he was taken to Garfield Hospital for treatment.

Walter Huston Tries New Play On West Coast

Finds Audiences Difficult to Move With Drama of an Astronomer.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 7.—With rouge on his coatsleeve and lipstick on his cheeks, Walter Huston is winding up the first week's tryout today of an unique play, "Miles of Heaven," which should give Broadway a new kind of a thrill later this fall.

Huston, who was "Dodsworth" on the screen last winter and "Othello" on the stage, has a tense emotional drama of a man in love with his wife, his sister—and the stars.

He plays the part of William Herschel, the astronomer to the court of King George III two centuries ago, who built the first big telescope and discovered with it the planet, Uranus.

All this week Huston has been treading the boards of the 80-year-old Lobero Theater in Santa Barbara, which everybody considers a suburb of Hollywood, although it's 90 miles away. He will open the play September 13 in San Francisco. Then, if all goes well, he will take it East to give New York a look at a new kind of love story.

Backstage in the ancient theater, whose adobe walls have withstood the ravages of time, earthquakes and numerous other disasters, Huston peeled off the somber garb of the eighteenth century's premier star-gazer and talked about the play, which has Hollywood in two embattled camps. One thinks it's the finest drama seen here in many a year; the other claims it doesn't make sense.

Trouble Is Actors.

The lipstick on Huston's cheeks came from the kisses of his sister—and his wife, the rouge on his sleeve from the mirror of the 40-inch telescope, which the original Herschel spent a whole segment of his life polishing.

"The trouble with his play is us actors," Huston confessed. "Some nights we hit each line perfectly and build up the emotionalism to a tremendous climax. Other nights we slip up somehow—we don't know exactly where—and the audience thinks the show is terrible."

Huston must prove at each performance that he loves the stars in the heavens more than anything else. Or does he? He must somehow implant that question in the minds of the spectators. He must get them to wonder whether he loves his wife more than the planets, or his devoted sister even more. When he can get the customers in the proper mood, Huston and the Misses Nan Sunderland and Barbara O'Neil provide them drama such as they seldom have seen before. If the audience refuses to do any wondering, the play is a fizzle.

Author of this strange historic drama is David Hertz, who seems to be something of a Hollywood mystery man. He has written other plays which never have been produced. He now is under contract as a writer to Samuel Goldwyn, and he is 30 years old. That is every last thing that Huston knows about him.

"Except that he is mighty smart," the celebrated actor said.

Twain's Honesty.

The big problem at the Selznick studios these days is how honest a man was Mark Twain. It begins to look as if he took many a liberty with the facts when he wrote "Tom Sawyer," now being made into a Technicolor film.

The experts, for instance, went to northeast Missouri to look over the cave in which Tom and Huck Finn got lost. They found it, all right, but it didn't look much like the cavern which Twain described so vividly.

The movies therefore went the sage of Hannibal one better and built here in Hollywood such a cave as even he couldn't have imagined.

It is patterned after the caverns of Carlsbad, with modern improvements.

William C. Menzies designed the whole works, with stalagmites, stalactytes, limestone boulders, granite blocks and whatnot, all manufactured of sisal fiber, soused in plaster, and painted with spray guns.

High point of this cave, which is covered with 60,000 feet of black tarpaulin to keep out the California sunlight, is the bat chamber.

The producers figured on importing a couple of carloads of bats, until somebody remembered that bats aren't smart and hence are hard to train. They get into folks' hair in spite of themselves and without regard to camera angles.

The studio therefore built its own bats, which operate with wires, like puppets, and are guaranteed to mind director Norman Taurog.

Dietrich Eyebrows Reformed in 'Angel'

Marlene Dietrich's eyebrows, which have arched up and out throughout her film career, have returned to normal in "Angel," her new Paramount starring picture. This change in Miss Dietrich's make-up resulted from the star's own suggestion, concurred in by Dot Ponedel, her make-up artist, and Ernst Lubitsch, producer-director of the picture.

The change was in line with Lubitsch's emphasis upon a down-to-earth realism in this Dietrich picture to differentiate it from preceding films in which fantasy and exoticism dominated.

In other ways, according to Miss Ponedel, the star's make-up has been altered for "Angel." The front of her face has been further highlighted, and the back of the face has been put in deeper shadows.

Miss Ponedel and Charles Lang, the star's photographer, agree that the result of the new make-up and normal eyebrows makes her even a better subject for the camera than she was in "Desire," in which she is supposed to have been most strikingly photographed.

Before the Bar, Or Behind Them

Nine out of 11 pictures in which John Beal has appeared have had either a jail or courtroom scene. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actor at present is working in both a jail and a courtroom for scenes in his new picture, "Madame X."

Barbara Stanwyck Unearths Her Smothered Talents In Title Role of Film Version of 'Stella Dallas'

Samuel Goldwyn's New Picturization of Olive Higgins Prouty's Novel Is Picture of First Rank; Additional Civic Theater Tryouts Tonight; Theater Guild and Guthrie McClintic Both Busy; Notes.

IT HAS long been the conviction of this column that Barbara Stanwyck is a more competent actress than many of her recent screen roles have indicated. Perhaps more than any other contemporary Hollywood star the victim of flagrant miscasting, Miss Stanwyck has floundered about in assignments that never should have been allotted her—as witness her beauty parlor performance in "A Message to Garcia." Now, at long last, Miss Stanwyck escapes from this stigma and executes an exacting and colorful characterization with impressive skill.

BELL.

This comes about in "Stella Dallas," picturized with punctilious care by Samuel Goldwyn and hailed as one of the foremost dramatic subjects of the season in other cities where it has been shown. Miss Stanwyck's capability and this corner's conviction both were vindicated upon the screen of the bandbox projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon, when "Stella Dallas" was unwound for the drama desks, preliminary to its presentation at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning Friday.

"Stella Dallas" usually is catalogued as a "great drama of mother love." That is what it is, primarily, but it also is a preachment of some strength on the side of environment and precept. It is imbued both with dramatic fiber and a tremendous tug at the feminine heartstrings. Also it may be relied upon to open the tear ducts of both genders with the infinite pathos of its sacrificial love. Manager Sam Wheeler of the Twentieth Century-Fox Exchange probably still is busy mopping up the lachrymose floods that deluged the premises during yesterday's screening. Bridges have been washed away by less.

However, the picture has its flashes of ludicrous comedy, too, thanks largely to the inebriety of Alan Hale in the race track role of Ed Munn, which he plays with such ribald enthusiasm as never to be recognized as the polished and debonair Baron in "Thin Ice."

But more important than these divergent threads that enter into the fabric of the play is the manner in which they have been deftly woven into an even and perfectly blended whole. "Stella Dallas," it seemed to me yesterday, never wavers from a true fidelity to the spirit and purpose of Olive Higgins Prouty's book, from which it was adapted. In this regard, if no other, it is far the superior of the original silent version of the story in which the late Belle Bennett and Lois Moran appeared in the parts of mother and daughter, now played with such admirable success by Miss Stanwyck and Anne Shirley. The efficient and youthful Miss Shirley may not possess quite Miss Moran's beauty, but she is a rising young actress of much greater warmth and depth of feeling.

Earlier mention of the ill-judged "A Message to Garcia" brings to mind the fact that John Boles also appeared in that epic of the Cuban jungles with Miss Stanwyck and, along with Wallace Beery and Herbert Mundin, did much to pull that item out of the quagmire in which it was almost hopelessly submerged. You would hardly recognize him, either, in the role of Steve Dallas. He does a restrained and thoroughly natural piece of work.

So great has been the local response to the announcement of the first try-outs for places in the cast of the first of the season's productions by the Washington Civic Theater—held last night—that it has been found necessary by the management to audition the applicants in two installments. A second series of try-outs, therefore, will be held tonight in the same place at the same hour—Wardman Park Theater at 7:30 p. m. And please, urge those in authority, be there on time!

• • • •

The first midnight show of the season, to the best of my knowledge and belief, will be given in the Rialto Theater tonight. Technically, the extra performance will be Thursday morning since it is scheduled to begin at 12:01 a. m. The program will consist of a combination of picture and specialty acts.

The feature film will be "After the Thin Man," costarring William Powell and Myrna Loy. The specialties will be contributed by a long list of local celebrities, including Morris Freed, impersonator, who recently scored on the Capitol stage in Gene Ford's "Going Native" revue. It also is being bruited about that Johnny Perkins, m. c. and chief comic of the Capitol's current bill, will be among those present, surrounded by others of equal note, if not equal girth.

The performance is for the benefit of the Sons of the American Legion Detachment Drum and Bugle Corps of Washington, thus eliminating that omnipresent nuisance known as the amusement tax.

With the Theater Guild's opening play of the new season, Ben Hecht's "To Quito and Back," being readied by Philip Moeller for its Boston premiere on September 20, and the second Guild play, "Madame Bovary," now in rehearsal under the direction of Benn W. Levy for its first presentation in this city at the National Theater on October 4, still another Guild offering will go into rehearsal with a strong cast as soon as John Cromwell returns East from Hollywood to direct Sidney Howard's new play, "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle." The last named work will play Washington, also at the National, of course, as the fourth subscription play of the forthcoming season of the American Theater Society of Washington, arriving probably in mid-November, close on the heels of "Tovarich." The demand for subscription seat reservations, incidentally, is currently the greatest in the six-year history of the American Theater Society in the Capital. This is a heartening sign when it is recalled that last season's reservations trebled the number of the year before. A friendly tip would be to get in the going before it is too late.

Speculation as to the content of "The Star-Wagon," Maxwell Anderson's new play, its mood and method, the eminent Dick Maney points out, has kept the curious on the verge of a nervous breakdown since its producer-director, Guthrie McClintic, announced that it is a modern prose play, quite unlike Anderson's poetic dramas of last season, "The Wingless Victory," "Masque of Kings" and "High Tor."

Mr. McClintic, via Mr. Maney's smoking typewriter, now drops a few more hints. Not only will "The Star-Wagon" be modern and verseless, but it will have many comic and romantic moments. The completed cast, headed by Burgess Meredith and Lillian Gish, includes such reputable Broadway players as Mildred Natwick, Kent Smith, Russell Collins, Jane Buchanan, Whitner Bissell, Muriel Starr, Edmond O'Brien and Barry Kelly.

Meredith last season was "High Tor's" hero, while Miss Gish, as Washington well remembers, was the Ophelia to John Gielgud's Hamlet. Russell Collins played the title role in "Johnny Johnson," never seen locally, and both Kent Smith and Mildred Natwick were in Katharine Cornell's production of George Bernard Shaw's "Candida." "The Star-Wagon" plans to set itself up in the Empire Theater, in New York, on September 29.

• • • •

Washington's own Ina Claire, if you have followed the parade this far, has returned to New York to discuss her forthcoming production of "Barchester Towers" with Mr. McClintic. This is Thomas Job's adaptation of the Anthony Trollope novel in which Miss Claire is to be starred. There are rumors, too, that Mr. McClintic is to present Sinclair Lewis' first solo attempt as a playwright and that he has assigned Robert Turney the task of doing an adaptation of Schiller's "Don Carlos." Heretofore, it must be pigeon-holed in every memory, Sinclair Lewis, Nobel prize winner, always has huddled with a collaborator on his stage efforts.

Reaches New Heights on Screen

As a sacrificial mother in Samuel Goldwyn's new picturization of Olive Higgins Prouty's novel of "Stella Dallas," coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday, Barbara Stanwyck at last has a role before the cameras that will do much to rehabilitate her as an actress of the first rank. She is accorded flawless support in a fine production by John Boles, Anne Shirley, Alan Hale and a long list of other capable players.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 7.—Idol chatter: Wonder why stars who pine so volubly to "get away from it all" invariably spend their vacations at the most fashionable resorts? Cited for the Croix de Merite: Helen Broderick—offered $2,500 a week to star in a radio skit, she refused because it did not suit her style of comedy. Jim Cagney never forgets his dialogue for a scene—but he never remembers to mail a letter. Franchot Tone would like to return to the stage—and would if it were not for the gold in them thar Hollywood hills. One word description of Eleanor Powell: rhythmi-calorific.

HELEN BRODERICK.

If you think Marlene Dietrich is unemotional, you should have seen—and heard—her when she tripped and fell on the set the other day. Wonder if the fact that marriage licenses tip off one's real age might account for Mae West's persistent denials? Life's little ironies: The one actor with a perfect screen name—Lyle Hollywood—had to change it to Lyle Talbot because it sounded phony. Since the death of Jean Harlow, Bill Powell for the first time looks his real age. Hollywood oddities: John and Mrs. Boles were head-over-heels in love when they did not have a dime—and they still are.

The publicity peddlers are not exaggerating when they praise Constance Bennett's flair for interior decoration. Of the 87 registered "stunt men" in pictures 15 years ago, only six are still alive. Movie star patronage has made Ensenada, Mexico, the No. 1 honeymoon spot of 1937.

In this morning's mail, among the usual hodge-podge of publicity letters, was one envelope, stamped with big red letters that spelled "IMPORTANT—RUSH!" Considerably impressed, I hurriedly opened it—and the first item that I read informed me that Clark Gable brushes his teeth five times a day! I have been sitting here ever since, trying to decide whether Clark carries his toothbrush in a best pocket or a pants pocket, and trying to understand why the news is so darned important. Rather than waste any more time on it, I am "rushing" the announcement on to you.

Hollywood places such emphasis on its stars that you seldom hear much about the great army of writers who concoct the stories and dialogue that give the stars their chance for fame. In Filmtown, itself, the writers are just as important as the players, and, as a class, they earn even more money. Studios fight for their services and a top-notcher, like Anita Loos, William Slavens McNutt or Gene Markey often gets as much as $2,500 a week or $25,000 a picture. New York used to be the literary capital of America; today, with virtually every outstanding author looting the movie mine, nine-tenths of America's short stories and novels are being written in Hollywood.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has, at the moment, 123 authors under contract and is shopping for more. The surest road to Hollywood success is a by-line in one of the popular fiction magazines.

Such excitement as there is at Twentieth Century-Fox over a shy red-haired beauty named Arleen Whelan! A few weeks ago, she was a manicurist in a Hollywood boulevard barber shop. Half of her male patrons tried to interest her in a "picture career"—with each one casting himself in the role of protector and "friend," but a dragon, in the person of the barber shop owner, guarded the princess. Anyone who tried to sell his wares directly to Arleen was ruled out. Finally a Twentieth Century-Fox director gave proof of his sincerity by talking, not to Arleen, but to the dragon. Tests were arranged and—presto!—Cinderella's pumpkin became a golden coach and her bargain day pumps a pair of magic slippers. I want to watch Arleen's predicted flight to stardom—and see how long she remembers her debt to a kindly dragon whose canny counsel helped make it all possible.

Option Taken Up On Three Players

Options on the continued services of three young players, Diana Gibson, Alan Bruce and Jane Rhodes, have been exercised by S. J. Briskin, vice president in charge of production at RKO-Radio.

Miss Gibson not long ago played the feminine lead opposite Lee Tracy in "Behind the Headlines." Bruce has appeared in several films, his last being "Music for Madame." Miss Rhodes' first part was in support of Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers in the recently completed "Stage Door."

"Silver Birthday."

Director George Seitz has been megaphoning pictures for 25 years. He started with "The Perils of Pauline," playing a part and directing at the same time.

New York, Sept. 7.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.: Phil Baker, who broadcasts for your rival, Gulf Oil, has been very much distressed because his programs aren't heard in Hollywood. Baker, now in Hollywood, therefore arranged with his sponsors, when his new series begins, to include a Hollywood outlet for those programs . . . Gulf Oil, in satisfying this whim of his—a whim which will aid him in his screen career—also had to satisfy their practical desires. And so—to justify this added expenditure—they are installing, in Hollywood proper, one Gulf Oil pump!

• • • •

DWIGHT DAVIS: Just before Don Budge lost the American doubles championship, Frank Hunter—three times champ—had words with him, said that Budge was getting too big a head, and would lose . . . . George Burns: Jack Benny, who just returned from Europe, will drive back to the Coast on a "See America" tour. Throughout the trip he'll keep the radio in his car wide open—to catch up on programs . . . Jim Tully: Tom Webster, the British cartoonist, saw your long hair, and now calls you "Public Dandruff Number One!"

• • • •

ERIE R. R.: Harpo Marx returned from Pennsylvania in one of the trains. He entered the dining car and was seated at a table for two. The occupant of the other chair was a little lady who couldn't help but observe Harpo devouring a huge meal, carefully and silently . . . The waiter brought the dessert, and Harpo finished it. Then the waiter brought the check, and while the venerable lady stared and gasped, Harpo Marx put pepper and salt on the check—and ate it!

• • • •

PERSONALS: Richard Bennett was reminiscing with John Barrymore and reminded him of that day, long ago, when they both were at the Savoy in London, and retired to their room after a hectic evening. They both spouted verse until Barrymore suddenly disappeared, and Bennett didn't miss him until morning. He phoned the room clerk and asked for "John Barrymore, please" . . . He heard a voice answer: "This is John Barrymore," and then ensued their conversation. When it was over Bennett discovered that it hadn't been a phone conversation at all—that Barrymore hadn't disappeared—that he was under the bed!

• • • •

SOCIAL NOTES: The George S. Kaufmans held a bridge party at their home—a game which was interrupted when a neighbor made a formal call—presenting her card, etc. The distinguished and venerable lady was ushered into the drawing room and introduced to the guests. Harpo Marx called for three red tennis balls, juggled them, and then told the lady: "Now you do it," . . . Somewhat puzzled, she tried it . . . "Now," Harpo announced, "we'll all stand on our heads." He did, but the lady hesitated. "Get my revolver. I wanna do some shootin'," Harpo next announced . . . When the caller evinced fright, Harpo demanded a razor, instead, for the purpose of shaving the cat . . . The caller left, and the bridge game continued.

MARC LACHMANN, press agent for Universal, collaborated with Paramount's publicist in spreading that Edgar Bergen-Judy Canova splitup which made the front pages . . . The drama critics here, in reviewing "Room Service," agreed unanimously that Sam Levene's portrayal in the producer's role was perfect. And RKO, which will produce the film version, has considered every prospect—except Levene . . . Despite the reports via radio, Isabel Hallin, the Mass. school marm who was fired for allegedly serving cocktails, has not visited Hollywood yet. She's still in New York, working on screen-tests and articles for Liberty.

GYPSY ROSE Lee's sister, who spells her name "Havick," will have the Betty Lawford role in the Chicago company of "The Women"—the role calling for her to take a bath onstage . . . Anita Colby, the model whose name was changed by Paramount from Anita Counihan, went to Dick Berlin's party with her sister, Frances. Berlin introduced them: "You know the Counihan sisters—Miss Colby and Mrs. Riordan."

Ann and Raymond Costarred Again

Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern, who have scored heavily at the box office in four RKO-Radio features, will play opposite one another again in the same studio's new romantic comedy, "She's Got That Swing," to be produced by Al Lewis, with Joe Santley megaphoning. Victor Moore and Helen Broderick will be prominently cast also.

The story, written by Joseph Hoffman and Monroe Shaff, recites the adventures in romance and finance when a girl night club entertainer is incorporated.

Hepburn Returns For New Picture

Katharine Hepburn, who has been vacationing at the Connecticut home of her parents since she and Ginger Rogers completed their co-starring roles in "Stage Door," will return to Hollywood this week to start her next RKO-Radio vehicle, "Bringing Up Baby." Cliff Reid will produce, with Howard Hawks directing.

"Bringing Up Baby," a fast-moving, modern romatic comedy by Hagar Wilde, is being adapted to the screen by the author and Dudley Nichols. The story was originally published in Collier's.

Lupe Velez 'Gets Man' on Screen

Lupe Velez, fiery little Mexican actress, has a new song, "I Always Get My Man," to sing in "High Flyers," latest feature comedy for Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. The number was written by Dave Dreyer and Herman Ruby.

Two other songs by Dreyer and Ruby, "I'm a Gaucho" and "Keep Your Head Above Water," also will be featured in the new picture.

* X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1937 17

This Morning

Mr. Marshall Debunks 'Modern' Baseball.

By Shirley Povich.

The cuspidor was already wobbling merrily when, ping! another stream of rich brown fluid banged against the thing—a direct hit at 15 paces. There wasn't much doubt about the marksman. It had to be Pete Marshall, who was tilted back in a chair, his number twelves propped against a desk and his face buried in an early edition.

POVICH.

For 50 years, man and boy, Old Pete had been on the receiving end of telegraph sets around newspaper offices (and still is, in fact), and it is a fine contempt that he has for most everything that is modern in athletics. So, working vigorously on the fruit of the leaf between his jaws, he emitted one more young geyser at the hapless gaboon, watched it spin crazily and then looked up.

"When are you punks gonna stop writin' that stuff about the Yankees bein' the greatest team in the history of baseball?" he barked. "Hell, they ain't in it with the Old Orioles. There was a ball team! They'd blast these Yanks right outa the league and teach 'em baseball besides."

Issatso?

• • • •

"Yeah, 'at's so? Why, these Yanks ain't got anybody who could hold a candle to most of those guys on the Orioles. I seen that Joe DiMaggio. I'd like to see him try to hit some of that stuff the old Orioles had to hit against. He couldn't hit that emery ball or that shine ball or that spitter they used to throw if they let him use a shovel. All those Yanks see are dinky curves and fast balls down the middle, and they can stand up there and swing with toeholds.

• • • •

"Why, that Wilbert Robinson and Willie Keeler would probably hit .650 against the kind of pitching those Yanks are facing. Keeler was over .400 in the days when they didn't have this rubber ball they use now. He'd only show the pitcher about a foot of his bat, but he would slam that ball anywhere he wanted to put it. McGraw would murder this kind of pitching and so would Hughie Jennings and Steve Brodie."

I suppose Babe Ruth would have been a bunter in that league.

• • • •

"Ruth, ho-ho. You think he was great, I suppose. Did you ever see Ed Delehanty or Pop Anson? Well, I thought so. Those guys were hitting against real pitching and they were real hitters. I'd like to see 'em hitting

• • • •

What's tickling you now?

• • • •

"I was just thinking about this afternoon—down at Tony's barber shop. Those wise guys are down there every day listening to Arch McDonald broadcast the outatown games. What a going over I gave 'em."

• • • •

"Well, they're all the time making bets about this guy getting a hit or striking out or Washington scoring a run or somethin' like that and I just couldn't stand it any longer. I though I'd have a little fun with those punk two-bit betters and started calling 'em for 'em."

Whaddaya mean, you started calling 'em?

• • • •

"Why, I'd tell 'em every time whether a fellow was gonna hit or strike out or whether Washington was gonna score. 'Member when Sington hit that home run in the fourth inning of the first game. I called that for 'em when he only had one strike on him. I had those guys nuts. They still think I'm some kind of a prophet. I told 'em Wasdell was gonna get that triple and that Buddy Lewis was gonna get his homer. You coulda knocked 'em over with a feather when they found out I was right."

And then, just for emphasis, Old Pete carefully drew a bead on the corner gaboon, toyed with it mentally for a full half-minute, and then sent the thing into a crazy, drunken dance with a full bath of tobacco juice from 10 paces.

• • • •

But say, Pete, how about this business of calling all those hits. You didn't really, did ya?

"Sure I did. Called every one of 'em—right, too. It was just a breeze. I knew what had happened before Arch McDonald knew himself. I could hear what was coming over that telegraph ticker right through the radio. And I haven't spent 50 years in this business for nothing."

Broadribb Says Money Is Withheld

By the United Press.

Long Branch, N. J., Sept. 7.—Tommy Farr, British heavyweight champion, who stayed 15 rounds with Joe Louis last week, announced tonight that he was "definitely through" with his manager, Ted Broadribb, and that he was so disgusted with the boxing game that he was considering permanent retirement from the ring.

Farr, who was attending a testimonial dinner given by American friends at the West End Casino, said it was useless to try and explain their differences.

"It is a feud of long standing that only a few of our closest associates can comprehend," he said.

The open breach occurred last week-end when Broadribb tried to crowd seven persons into a four-passenger car for a trip to Atlantic City, Farr said.

"I was so sick and tired of the whole mess, that I balked and wouldn't ride under those conditions," he said.

"I have suffered nothing but mental anguish and discomforts for the last couple of years, and I'm weary of the boxing game, the way it is being run now," Farr said. "I have saved enough money over the last seven years so that I can live in luxury the rest of my life and am seriously considering retiring and never make another fight.

"Another thing, Broadribb almost ruined me by experimenting on me in the Louis fight. I placed gauze over the cuts beneath my eyes in such a manner that I could hardly see. Tom Evans, my trainer for eight years, advised Broadribb against it, but he insisted on his own way. All Broadribb knows about me is what he learned since he saw me in training once before the Max Baer fight last spring," Farr said.

Broadribb's contract does not expire until July, 1938, and until that time is entitled to 25 per cent of Farr's earnings. But he has offered Farr's services to Babe Culnan, of Newark, N. J., for 50 per cent of his share, which would amount to 12½ per cent of what Farr makes. Culnan, who supervised Tommys training for the Joe Louis title fight eight days ago, was considering the proposition, but indicated he was not satisfied and wanted a larger cut.

Broadribb confided that he hadn't received "a dime" of his share for the Louis-Farr fight. Farr has refused to "okay" the training expenses, and no division of the money has yet been made. Broadribb said that he had been forced to spend "every penny in my pockets," and that he had borrowed $200 from Promoter Mike Jacobs to tide him over.

The grizzled little manager said that the training expenses had amounted to about $3,000, which, deducted from Tommy's tax-free $51,000, would leave $48,000. Broadribb's 25 per cent would be $12,000, but he still has to pay Federal taxes of about $2,000, leaving his net at $10,000.

"I am going to take it up with Mike Jacobs tomorrow," Broadribb said, "and if that doesn't do any good, I will go before the boxing commission. If they do not get my money for me, I guess I'll have to sue."

Farr said that he knew nothing about Broadribb's arrangements with Culnan to take over the management.

The British heavyweight titleholder denied withholding Broadribb's share of the Louis fight purse, saying "neither have I gotten a dime out of it so far."

Major Leagues '38 Opening Dates Set

Helen Jacobs Extended at Forest Hills

By Bill Bond,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 7. A post-holiday crowd of some 4,000 trekked out to the West Side Tennis Club today to see the combined men's and women's national singles championships brought up to the quarterfinal round in the upper half of both draws.

But most of those 4,000 were cheated for, while they sat in the stadium and saw such noted internationalists as Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Don Budge, Frankie Parker and Kay Stammers perform, the best matches were being played outside on the grandstand and clubhouse courts.

On the former, Helen Jacobs, the Berkeley, Calif., veteran who is one of the "Big Four" expected to crash into the semifinals, was pushed to the brink of elimination by Joan Ingram, English Wightman Cup doubles player who holds no singles ranking in her native land. Miss Jacobs won at 2—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Before a small crowd around the clubhouse, Big Charles Edgar Hare, southpaw British Davis Cupper, also had to put on a determined rally to defeat "Dark Horse" Merrimon Cunninggim, of Nashville, Tenn., and keep intact this championship's record of having a seeded star in each quarterfinal bracket. Hare edged his way into the round of eight at 4—6, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

Budge and the invading suffragettes never were extended. The Californian, who has lost a total of 15 games since opening his bid to add his native crown to the Wimbledon title, brushed aside Yvon Petra, young Frenchman, 6-0, 6-3, 6-1.

Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, the redheaded Don's lone rival for blasting honors among the women, took Evelyn Dearman, Joan Ingram's doubles partner, into camp at 6-4, 6-3 scores which were duplicated exactly by Miss Stammers in her defeat of Gracyn Wheeler, fifth-seeded American from Santa Monica, Calif.

Parker, winner of the decisive point in the Davis Cup challenge round against England, second-ranking to Budge in the 1936 first ten and seeded behind Budge and Bobby Riggs, beat Wood at 3-6, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-0. Hunt, carried to five sets yesterday by Owen Anderson, today came through at 3-6, 6-1, 6-1, 6-1 against Yamagishi.

Budge and Hunt will be quarterfinal opponents on Thursday, while Parker will go up against Johnny Van Ryn, the Austin, Tex., veteran, who, after being carried to nine sets in his first two matches, served warning by gaining his second successive straight-set decision, over Charles R. Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., 6—3, 6—1, 6—1.

While Miss Jacobs and Miss Stammers filled adjoining spots in the round of eight, Miss Jedrzejowska drew as her next rival Ruth Mary Hardwick. Miss Hardwick scored at 6—2, 6—4, over Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, New York veteran.

Miss Jacobs, champion from 1932 to 1935, was given the shock of her life by Miss Ingram, who ran up a 4—1 lead in the last and deciding set.

The Californian, who hadn't been able to score as usual with her chop strokes, won the next game on her own service, and then came the crucial one. Five times Miss Ingram had the advantage, needed a single point to lead at 5—3. Five times the score was deuced, until finally Miss Jacobs got the advantage and, on the next point, the game as Miss Ingram belted one beyond the base line. Helen then ran through the last two games at love.

Terry Signs For 5 Years With Giants

Becomes Highest Paid of Managers; $40,000 Year Salary.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Sept. 7.—Bill Terry affixed his signature today to a new five-year contract, calling for an estimated $40,000 per annum, and then predicted his Giants, in keeping with an old New York custom, will clinch this year's National League pennant on the road.

The contract-signing utilized an off-day for the pace-makers. Terry came to terms last week. His old contract, at $27,500 per year, had one more season to go. It will be displaced in 1938 by the new agreement making Terry general manager. He will have complete charge of the Giants "farm" system, as well as the team on the field, and be the highest paid pilot in the majors.

"This may sound funny to you but I really think the Giants will play better ball on the road, with the pennant at stake, than they would before the home folks," said Terry.

"In the first place this ball club has shown what it can do in the tough spots. Right now we are getting the best combination of pitching and power that we've had all season."

"The only handicap of being the visiting club," added Terry, "is that we have to play that last inning every game, whether we are in front or not. There's a lot of psychology wrapped up in that ninth nning. Remember the finish we made to score five runs and tie the Cubs in the ninth at the Polo Grounds two weeks ago? That was the real turning point of this year's race."

The Giants start their final road trip in Brooklyn tomorrow. They will visit six rival bailiwicks before returning to the Polo Grounds. They think they have what it takes to stay on top, though they have made no plans yet to spend any part of the world series money. But from Terry on down to the bat boy the Giants are confident they will get "another crack" at the Yankees.

Baugh Due Here Today; Terms O. K.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 7—Sammy Baugh plans to marry soon after his arrival in the Capital, it was learned here through friends of Baugh and his sweetheart, Miss Edmonda Smith, 19, of Sweetwater, Tex. She is a junior at T. C. U.

"Slinging Sammy" Baugh tore off a long gain for the telephone company yesterday when he haggled over salary terms for 20 minutes before accepting the Washington Redskins' final offer.

George P. Marshall, owner of the Redskins, reached Baugh by long-distance phone at Fort Worth, Tex., and convinced the forward-passing ace it would be to his benefit to sign.

Marshall announced that a satisfactory adjustment of Baugh's contract had been made and that the Texan had agreed to report to the Redskins today after boarding a plane at Fort Worth.

Marshall received a wire last night which stated that Baugh would arrive at 6:30 p. m.

"It won't hurt him. He ought to be in shape after those two All-Star games, and it's high time he's starting to learn some of our plays," Flaherty said last night.

Rap Boston Quartet For 25 Safe Blows

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, Sept. 7.—The Nats, who have found a team they can lick with delightful consistency, licked the Red Sox twice today. They slapped down the Boston club, 11 to 5, in the first game of a double-header and then made it unanimous by taking the second game, 5 to 4.

The manner in which their poor relations from Washington won both battles was (or should have been) pretty galling to Joe Cronin's nouveau riche Red Sox. His daddy-in-law's Nats jolted Cronin's Boston athletes right out of a 3-0 lead to win the opener and in the second game the Red Sox literally ran themselves into defeat.

Three separate cases of dizzy base running in the late innings choked off the tying run for the Red Sox in that second game. Monte Weaver was wobbling badly in the sixth inning when the Sox came up with two runs to narrow the Nats' lead to 5-4 and had Chapman on second base with the tying run and none out.

But Chapman was trapped off second base and run down when Berg grounded to Travis and Marcum's two-bagger that followed was wasted effort.

Again in the eighth, Chapman led off with a two-bagger to right field and the Sox were in a swell position to tie the score but Chapman was caught at third when he tried to advance on Berg's bunt that Linke, who had relieved Weaver, pounced on with all the agility of a jaguar.

And again in the ninth the Sox wasted a glowing opportunity to tie the score. Cronin was on first with one out after his single when Foxx flied to deep left. Young Jimmy Wasdell made a leaping catch against the fence to bring the ball down, but Cronin heedlessly paid no heed and kept running around the bases, whereat, a throw back to the infield doubled him off first.

Mel Almada, the Boston cast-off, was batting in a vengeful spirit today. He made 3 of the Nats' 16 hits in that first game and he made 3 more of the Nats' 12 hits in that second game.

The Sox had picked up a run in each of the first two innings against Weaver, but Almada opened the third with a double to right and Buddy Lewis promptly reached Marcum for a single to right that hacked one run away from the Sox's 2-0 lead. And in the next inning, Jimmy Foxx muffed a grounder off Joe Kuhel's bat that led to the tying run, because Marcum then walked two hitters and Rick Ferrell brought Kuhel home with a long fly to left.

Almada got in another lick, though, in the fifth when the Nats scored three times to bounce into a 5-2 lead. He found the bases full when he stepped to the plate and promptly emptied 'em of two of his pals with a crisp single to center. Buddy Lewis drove in the third run of the inning with a terrific hoist to Cramer in right center.

Manager Bucky Harris got Weaver out of there after the Sox came up with two runs in their half of the inning and thanks to the light-headed base running of the Sox thereafter, Ed Linke preserved that 5-4 lead to the finish.

Jimmy DeShong won his first start

Post Notes on FISHING

By Bill Ackerman.

A fairly stiff northeaster blowing—until it is over stick to the sheltered grounds for your fishing. Piney Point is generally good, if the fish are under the shore, as they have been for the past several weeks. Almost any grounds up the eastern shore of the Potomac is fishable, while at Solomons there is sheltered water regardless of wind direction.

ACKERMAN

For the past three days, Solomons Island boats have been fishing at St. Leonards Lump, just above Point Patience. E. Reese Baker, fishing it Saturday night with one of George Bowen's captains, caught a 6 1/2-pound black drum. On the following evening three blues were taken, the largest of which scaled 4 1/4 pounds.

An old Negro, for the past week handlining the Lump from an old bateau, has been catching from 40 to 75 big weakfish daily and no matter how the other boats crowd him, it seems impossible to get in on his luck. The only possible answer is that he must live right.

Going back to that black drum—Ed Bowen reports it as a channel bass, but when you delve into the matter a little, qualifies his statement and says a black channel bass, and backs it up to the tune of five bucks. It looks as though we will have to take him written proof that it is only the red drum that rates "channel bass" if we are going to collect that five.

Col. W. T. Shantland, fishing with Capt. Taft Tippett over the week-end, caught a few small blues and quite a few rock. They fished from St. Jeromes Creek to Point No Point Light, due to the heavy sea running on the Middle Grounds.

Until last week the largest bluefin tuna to be brought to gaff during this most exceptional Nova Scotian fishing season was the 765-pounder of Dr. Richard Sutton, but only because the line of R. S. Schenk broke after he had killed an 800-pound fish and was bringing it in. Saved by handlining, but disqualified by the same act, it would have been a new North American record.

On September 4, John Stuart Martin, after a battle of 4 hours and 45 minutes, brought to boat a fish that weighed 821 pounds. It is a new North American record and supersedes the 788-pound tuna of Dr. John L. Brinkley, caught last year, and only 32 pounds shy of the world record on these great fish.

To date, more than 100 of these fish have been caught this season at Wedgeport, and fully half that number at Liverpool. Good augury for the international tuna matches that start at Wedgeport on September 11 and continue through the 13th.

The team representing the United States includes in addition to Paul Townsend, well known local angler, Kip Farrington, Hugo Rutherford, B. Davis Crowningshield, J. Lakin Baldridge, A. P. Blumenthal and W. Goadby Lawrence, all of them big game anglers of note and with years of experience in taking big fish.

For trout fishermen who might not have had all of the sport they would have liked during the spring season, go to Jersey. It is only several hours' drive, and you have until September 30 to fish streams that are reported to be in excellent condition, with the water high and cool.

Those in the northern part of the State, always rated the best, have thousands of trout in them, left from the spring stocking. In addition, 25,000 fish from the Hacketts-town hatchery have replenished the supply for this final fling at the sport for the year.

Some of the largest trout of the past two seasons have been taken during this 30-day fall opening. From past performances it is bound to become permanent.

Applicants for 1936 licenses in New York State were asked to make a statement of fish they had caught in 1935. One hundred and 56 thousand made no statement, 141,000 reported no fish taken, while the balance, 85,000, reported they had caught nearly a million trout and half that many bass. This is the largest number reported taken since 1929, when over a million trout were caught by anglers.

The first blue marlin ever caught in Texas coastal waters was taken recently by R. J. Montgomery, of Rio Hondo. It was hooked 60 miles off Port Isabel, was 10 feet 2 inches in length and weighed 326 pounds.

And that is the way a new sport-fishing section is made—it all lays in finding the first one.

A St. Marys, W. Va., angler, fishing Middle Island Creek this summer, saw something surging up and down in the water and rowed his boat over to find out what it was all about. Seeing the tail of a catfish, he grabbed ahold, found another attached to it and pulled both in. The larger, weighing 31 pounds, had started to swallow the other cat, weighing about 10 pounds, but his heavy horns were too much to get through the doorway to Jonah's lodgings—result, a fine chowder.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Narragansett.

Dear Al:

I believe I can tell this one now and not run the risk of starting a fight. Clocker Mike was in a black jack game at Marlboro last week. I happened by and looked over his shoulder. Of course, the object of the game is to get a total of 21 points by adding up the numbers on the cards. If the player gets more than 21 he is "busted," or loses. I saw Mike's cards and he had a ten, a four and a six, a good hand. In a friendly jesture, I tapped him on the neck with my program. Without looking around, Mike tossed the cards among the discarded hands, got up and walked away. That night, I asked him how come he quit with what looked like a winning hand. Mike explained. The game started with some greasy, torn cards. Later a man came along with a new deck. He offered to give it to the players. They accepted and threw away the old one. The card-giver did not attempt to get into the game on his own, but sat down beside Mike. "How about letting me play on your hand," the stranger whispered. He slipped Mike a quarter and Mike bet a half dollar. On the first hand, Mike had a total of 13. "Hit it," said the stranger. Mike did and drew an eight, giving him 21. The worst he could get was an even break. "This guy's lucky," Mike said to himself. "Bet the half," whispered the stranger. Mike did and with the coaching of the stranger got 20, which proved enough to win. On the next deal, Mike had 17 to start. The dealer had a four showing. Mike wanted to stand on the 17, but the stranger nudged him to take a card. Mike did and it was a four, making him 21. Mike and the stranger had won every bet, but Mike was beginning to smell a rodent. On the next hand, Mike knew his nose wasn't deceiving him. Mike's first two cards totaled 19. Mike didn't want to draw another card, but the stranger stomped on his toe. Mike hoped and almost prayed that it would be a ten, a losing card. But the next card proved to be a deuce, making another 21. Mike showed them sheepishly. It was on the following hand that I tapped Mike on the neck with my program. "Honest, boss, it felt just like a razor. That's why I quit the game. I had to split with the stranger and my share was only $1.75. Believe me, I did $175 worth of shaking," Mike concluded. BILL.

First race—Primer is better than a beginner and promises to show a lot of speed in this field. May be along in time to take it all and I'm going to string along. Witson is a fair sort and will battle with Starogan for the place award.

Second race—Caravan Queen, one we met at Delaware Park, is a fast breaker and may open a long lead and stick to her guns long enough to annex this purse. Dedication and Felwyn seem to have a money edge on the others.

Third race—Deep End appears to be well placed in this field. Needs only the right ride to take down a set of brackets. To The Rescue may crowd Upsala into third money.

Fourth race—Ladfield is a veteran with enough class to win a race of this sort. Conditions suit his purposes and I'm going to string along. Happy Knot promises to be a prominent contender. Mixwell should be no worse than third.

Fifth race—Bacon to bring home the bacon in this company. Likes the route and any price will be a good one. Preeminent has speed and is a dangerous member of the field. Rough Time has worked well and should be in the thick of contention.

Sixth race—Wiggle In and The Singer figure to battle it out for the main money in this event. Both are fit and ready. Blackthorn will not be far out of it if alertly handled at the post.

Seventh race—Joda, Mostly and Canavia is the way I prefer them in this test. Looks like a good betting race, with the first three figuring close.

Eighth race—Boscobel is in excellent form now and may take the measure of Nancy Mae. Chambersburger formidable and should take care of the show cash.

Best bet—Ladfield.

2—Justa Giro, Adriatic, Miss Tryeon.
3—Landsman, Schley B., Mabel Beyond.
6—Fife, Our Ship, Penway.
7—Clymene, Huppy, Fair Billy.

Best bet—Tambov.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANY MOONS, $14.50, $6.70, $3.70; HIGH TREASON, $8.20, $4.60; LOLOMA, $2.90.

MANY MOONS forced the pace of HIGH TREASON and gained slight lead when passing the furlong pole, drawing clear in the closing strides. HIGH TREASON had speed from the start, although while showing the way, was unable to draw clear and weakened in the late stages and never in danger of losing the place. LOLOMA, in close quarters all down the backstretch, was forced to take up when MILLIMETER stumbled in front of her. She recovered and closed willingly in the stretch.

MANY STINGS moved through on the inside at the far turn, wore down GERT B. for command midway of the turn and drew out steadily through the stretch. CRUSAND, unable to keep pace during first half mile, closed with a rush through the stretch. GRAND LIGHT responded gamely when called upon, moved up willingly in the stretch, but unable to close any ground through the closing furlongs.

HUSKIE BOY forced the pace of MARLE until the closing five-sixteenths, wore the latter down for the lead, drawing out steadily. MARLE, prominent from the start, made a game bid to go along with the winner when challenged, but was not equal to the task. STAGE BEAUTY, unable to keep pace, closed willingly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Wellfleet. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:56. Off 5:01. Winner, Mrs. J. SWIVELNECK was not hurried during the early stages, began bettering his position when rounding from the backstretch, moved up on the outside of the leaders when straightening out in the stretch, drawing out in the last furlong. PAGE BOY, far back until the closing quarter mile, came with a belated rush, getting up in the closing strides to wear down PARMENARCH. The latter, restrained early while holding a promising position, moved up to dispute command with ENFIN and weakened under pressure in last sixteenth.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:27. Off 5:33. Winner, F. PAYRACK, prominent and restrained early, came with good energy in the closing drive. KINDACORN worked her way up gradually in last half mile and came with good energy. High Court Backs O'Hara Sets Hearing on Race Track Case for Next Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 7.—A declaration that there would be "no compromise" in the State Racing Association's battle to oust Walter E. O'Hara from the managing directorship of the Narragansett Race Track came tonight from Gov. Robert E. Quinn only a few hours after the Supreme Court granted O'Hara a review of his case.

"We contemplate action, and we intend to proceed as if nothing had happened," the Governor said. He declined to specifically state what the action might be.

"Our action will have nothing to do with the court action," the Governor added.

Earlier today the State Supreme Court granted O'Hara's petition for a review of the case before that body and set Thursday for a hearing before the full bench.

The court did not take action upon a section of the petition in which O'Hara asked that the Racing Commission be restrained from attempting to enforce their order ousting him as managing director of 'Gansett.

The petition also alleged that the records of a week-end commission hearing showed insufficient cause for his removal and that the action of the racing board had no basis in law.

The records of that week-end hearing may be called before the court under today's decision.

Bees Beaten By Dodgers In Late Rally

Flatbush Crew Chases Lanning; Wins Game by 6-1 Score.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Sept. 7.—Rallying in the late innings behind the effective hurling of Fred Fitzsimmons and Roy Henshaw, the Brooklyn Dodgers today defeated the Boston Bees 6 to 1 in the rubber contest of the three-game series.

Fitzsimmons, making his first start since breaking a finger on his throwing hand August 4, worked the first seven innings, but tired and gave way to a pinch hitter. He held the Bees to five of their six hits and allowed their only run.

Johnny Lanning yielded two runs in the sixth when Lavagetto hit a homer, and then was blasted from the mound in the eighth as the Dodgers counted four times on successive singles by Buddy Hassett, Babe Phelps and Lavagetto, and another single by Henshaw after Guy Bush had taken over the mound.

The Case Case.

It was reopened suddenly when young George Case telephoned Griffith from Trenton, N. J., that he had changed his mind and would accept a job with the Washington Club.

Case had been dismissed last week by Griffith when he demanded a $1,000 bonus for signing with the Nats, who had bought him from the Trenton team.

Griffith pleaded with Case to be sensible, pointing out that thousands of youths would welcome a chance to play in the big leagues. When Case insisted on the bonus, Griffith worked up a case of indignation and sent Case packing. Never darken my door again, was Griffith's ukase.

Case, a 23-year-old outfielder, who hit .330 for Trenton, was ordered yesterday to join the Nats' line-up in Philadelphia today. Griffith is pretty positive Case will not change his mind again, but the Nats' owner will be watching the Washington line-up just—you guessed it—in case.

Nats Wallop Bosox In Double-Header

in more than a month when he licked the Red Sox in the opener, but there was grave doubt about how it was all going to end when the Sox pummeled DeShong for a 3-0 lead in the first two innings. Freddie Sington finally put the Nats back in the ball game with a tremendous homer over the high left-field wall in the fourth with none on base. Rube Walberg had retired the first eight Washington batters in a row.

The Nats didn't catch up to the Sox until the fifth and then they went in front, 4-3. Walberg encouraged 'em by walking the first two men to face him and then with one out, he heaved Buddy Lewis' tap in front of the plate into the leftfield boxes. One run scored and two runners moved into scoring position on the heave. At which point, Cece Travis banged a single to center and the Nats had three runs for the inning.

But DeShong was acting as if he didn't care about winning the ball game. Because he gave two runs right back to the Red Sox in the same inning and the Nats were trailing, 5-4. He filled the bases on Cronin's double and a pair of walks and the runs scored on Higgins' scratchy single off Mihalic's glove and a forced play that followed.

But the Nats went right out and got all those runs back. Rick Ferrell and Jimmy (himself) DeShong singled and then along came Almada (that guy again!) with a single that pushed Ferrell home and DeShong to third. Young Gonzales was pitching for Boston at the time and he encountered more trouble when Buddy Lewis banged a single to center that scored DeShong. Gonzales was ordered to pass Travis purposely and fill the bases, but the thing must have become habit forming because in this crisis he walked Sington, too, and forced the third run of the inning home.

Thereafter, it was a breeze for the Nats and DeShong. The Sox were held scoreless in the last four innings but the Nats were sort of merciless. Jimmy Wasdell tripled to right and Rick Ferrell singled to center in the seventh for one more run and then Buddy Lewis led off a three-run assault in the eighth with an inside the park homer that cleared Chaoman's head and collided with the centerfield wall. They looked great.

Gonzaga's Grid Squad Steals March

Players Trained 8 Days at Colonial Beach; Backfield Intact.

By Jack Munhall.

With eight letter men heading the largest squad in the school's history, Coach Orrell Mitchell's Gonzaga eleven confidently awaits its opening game with Central High School on September 21.

The Purple stole a march on many of the other scholastic teams sneaking quietly away last week to spend eight days at Colonial Beach. Thirty-four boys made the trip to camp where Mitchell stressed particularly the fundamentals of blocking and tackling. Scrimmages were held infrequently and several promising players were uncovered to augment the four veteran backs and as many linesmen around whom Mitchell will build.

Returning from last year is virtually an intact backfield. Only Jimmy Boyle, who was out a great deal of last year with injuries, a factor which retarded Gonzaga, will be missing from the line-up. Jim Ellis, Jim Shaw, Bill Gardiner and Louis De Filipo are the experienced backfield men and all are "scat backs." Not one weighs over 160 pounds but all are fast and shifty and are expected to balance with speed and finesse what is lacked in heft.

Fenwick on Hand.

Thus with over half of the line composed of proven players, Mitchell's troubles are with lack of reserves rather than quality. From several promising newcomers, among them, John McEloskey, 175-pound guard; Lane O'Donnell, fleet end, Mitchell will fill the remaining front line positions. McEloskey and O'Donnell, both sophomores but with sandlot experience, showed up particularly well at Colonial Beach and may be the men needed.

Backs to perform well at camp were Jack Walsh, Eddie Shea and Jack Seiber, all youngsters who know their way while toting a pigskin, who will give the veterans a real battle for positions. So close is the competition that Mitchell has announced every backfield position open. However, the veterans because of their experience under fire will have an edge.

As usual, Mitchell, noted for his well-trained elevens, will bank on speed and deception to offset superior weight. Gonzaga's teams, invariably outweighed, have in the past presented lightning-swift ball carriers, intricate pass formations from which a potential lateral receiver is always available and hard-charging, smart lines, adept at diagnosing enemy plays.

Anacostia May Play.

Present plans call for a seven-game schedule, with one permanently open date and which will be filled soon, probably by Anacostia High. Conspicuously absent from a rather tough schedule are Roosevelt and Western Highs, who have been met the past five years. A newcomer is Loyola, of Baltimore. In years past the Loyola game was a fixture on the Purple's schedule and quite a rivalry had sprung up between the two Jesuit rivals. Relations were suspended about ten years ago.

Highlights of the schedule are the Catholic Prep League games with Gonzaga and St. John's, traditional foes. Although an opener, the Central tilt gives every indication of developing into one of the best gridiron contests of the early season. Gonzaga is better prepared than in several years and is bent on revenge for several bad beatings handed it by the Mount Pleasanters in late years.

September 21—Central at Central.
October 8—Loyola at Baltimore.
October 15—Tech at Tech.
October 22—Permanently open.
October 29—Washington and Lee at Ballston.
November 5—Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park.
November 12—St. John's (probably at Griffith Stadium).
November 19—Eastern at Eastern.

Eastern High Holds First Grid Practice

Artie Boyd, Eastern High School football coach and apparently the successor to Hap (Gloomy) Hardell until this year grid mentor at McKinley as proprietor of the coaches' "crying room," received an advance squad of 45 grid hopefuls in the first football practice in the school stadium.

Although Bill Kemp, unanimous all-high center and adjudged by the coaches the most valuable performer in the 1936 interhigh series, and Al Kidwell, an all-high halfback, head an array of letter men, Boyd just moans and shakes his head. "We can't do any worse than last year," he says, of the eleven which scored in only one interhigh contest. "So," he concludes, "I can promise a better team."

25 Western Grid Candidates Report

The outlook at present is exceedingly dark for the Red Raiders, who have returning only one regular from last year's powerful eleven, runner-up to Tech in the interhigh series.

Sam Snead, an all-high halfback choice in the minds of some selectors last season, is the sole veteran on hand and Ahern is faced with the discouraging task of molding a first-class team from scratch. With Snead as his backfield hope, he needs a whole line and at least three backs besides reserves.

The squad will be added to within the next few days as the boys begin returning from vacations.

Navy to Use Consensus of Grid Systems

By Dillon Graham.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 8.—Navy's new gridiron coach, square-jawed Lieut. Harry J. (Hank) Hardwick, will spring a new football system on the Sailors' foes this fall.

It is one of his own ideas, embodying the strong points of styles of coaches he has served under, and built to accommodate the "average" material he feels he has at the United States Naval Academy here.

"There are only four basic styles of football play and each has its strength and its weaknesses," he explained. "I've aided coaches who favored each of these systems. All I've done is to take the best features of these various offensives and try to mold them into a single system we can adopt here."

Navy's rivals will find the Midshipmen making a drastic departure from the pattern used successively for the last three years by Coach Tom Hamilton, now back on sea duty.

"We really had to make the change," Hardwick explained, "because we haven't a kicker to compare with Sneed Schmidt, who was graduated, and so we must maneuver chiefly from a close formation rather than Navy's customary kick formation.

"We tried my ideas in spring drills and were satisfied with the results. Necessity has really forced me into experimenting with something I've wanted to try a long while," he said.

HANK HARDWICK.

"Our backfielders are not versatile and so we can't get any deception by running plays from similar setups. We've had to build flexible formations that can be suited to the player's individual talents."

Hardwick, who played with Hamilton on Navy's 1936 team, has put in several terms as assistant coach here and last year tutored the U. S. S. Arizona team.

The Sailors lost an even dozen lettermen, but the chief casualties through graduation were Zeke Soucek, an end, and Schmidt, the kicker and ball carrier who scored the winning touchdown over Army last fall.

"We can't replace either of them," Hardwick said. "Otherwise we're in good shape. We have a bunch of nice, dependable backs, some fair booters and passers, and a bunch of heavy, fair forwards. But we must depend on pluggers for our gains; there isn't a flashy back in the lot."

Bill Ingram 2d, who starred last season, again will do most of the Navy's ball carrying, with Lem Cooke as his chief understudy.

The schedule:

September 25—William and Mary at Annapolis.
October 2—The Citadel at Annapolis.
October 9—University of Virginia at Annapolis.
October 16—Harvard University at Baltimore.
October 23—Notre Dame at South Bend.
October 30—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.
November 6—Columbia University at Annapolis.
November 20—Princeton at Princeton.
November 27—Army at Philadelphia.

Bayh, Here, to Stress Intra-Mural Sports

By Jack Munhall.

Tanned and the picture of vigorous health, Birch E. Bayh, head of the health and physical education department of the District of Columbia public senior and junior high schools, returned to his office in the Franklin Building yesterday after vacationing in his native Midwestern haunts, eager and prepared for the multiple and varied problems which annually confront him prior to the opening of a new school term.

The former Indiana school official, beginning his third year here, expressed appreciation of the wholehearted co-operation received last year which enabled him to produce excellent results.

Athletic in demeanor and build himself, Bayh also expressed a desire to include more and more intramural athletics in the current program. One of his sincerest hopes, he said, is to have every physically able boy and girl under his supervision participate in some form of healthful recreation.

As to the personnel of senior high physical education directors, Bayh said he knew of no immediate changes or additions. However, it is generally known that at least one such vacancy exists at Wilson High, where at least one man is expected to be added in the near future.

If the aforesaid position is filled by one not now employed in a senior high school, the first to be considered will be Bruce Kessler, who tops the list of qualifying candidates.

Kessler, a local boy and one of the best basket ball players ever to attend Eastern High School, is now a physical education director at Elliott Junior High, where his teams have fared more than well.

Behind Kessler are three others. Second choice, should Kessler decline, which is his option, will be Anthony Kupka, now at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School; third, Maurice Pincus, former New York University athlete who is now coaching at George Washington High in New York City, and fourth, Jack Shapiro, graduate of Temple University, where he carved a considerable athletic niche.

The High School Athletic Council, comprised of two representatives from each of the six schools engaging in inter-high athletics, will continue under its present heads. Bayh is the chairman, Rupert Schiertz, of Roosevelt, will continue as secretary and Jack Shapiro, of Western, as treasurer.

Anacostia, which just this year becomes a full-fledged senior high equipped to graduate, is not yet represented because it will not enter a football eleven in the forthcoming inter-high series and probably not compete in that field until track season.

Bayh confirmed what has been generally known that the current inter-high series basketball games will be played as double-headers at Teck and Roosevelt. This move is expected to stimulate interest in the court game that noticeably subsided following a decision in 1935 to play such contests singly.

This sason twin bills will be staged on Friday nights and Tuesday afternoons. Night games, an innovation here in scholastic ranks, will receive another acid test. These nocturnal exhibitions, so successful elsewhere, are counted on by scholastic devotees to greatly increase attendance.

U. S. Golf Pros Win in Canada By 8-4 Margin

Toronto, Sept. 7.—United States golf professionals won an international team match from Canada today, eight matches to four. The Americans captured five of the eight 18-hole singles tilts and lost only one of the four best ball foursomes.

Ralph Guldahl, United States Open champion, dropped his singles match to young Bob Gray, jr., of Windsor, 4 and 2, and Ed Dudley and Jimmy Hines also lost their singles. Sam Snead, Harry Cooper, Jimmy Thomson, Tony Manero and Horton Smith accounted for the American victories in the singles matches.

Guldahl came back in the afternoon to pair with Snead and trim Stanley Horne and Jules Huot, of Quebec, 3 and 2. Cooper and Smith whipped Bob Gray and Bill Kerr, of Canada, in another best ball foursome by the same score, and Dudley and Hines downed Ernie Wakelam and Gordon Brydson, 4 and 3. Bobby Alston and Bobby Burns scored the lone Canadian best ball win. They defeated Manero and Thomson in a hard fought match, 1 up.

3 National Net Matches Won By Coast Girl

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—Winning three matches within six hours, 17-year-old Barbara Winslow, of Hollywood, Calif., the favorite, today led seven other girls into the quarter-finals of the National Girls' Tennis Championships at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Starting a day late due to her play in the National singles at Forest Hills, Long Island, Miss Winslow soon caught up with the field by defeating Betty Cortright, of Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—2, Nellie Sheer, of Miami, 6—3, 6—3, and Ruth Carter, of Brookline, Mass., 6—1, 6—0.

Keeping pace with Miss Winslow were Hope Knowles and Madge Harshaw, of Philadelphia; Patty Kilmartin, of Miami Beach; Cissy Madden, of Brookline, Mass.; Jane Wagner, of Cincinnati; Patricia Cumming, of Westfield, N. J., and Helen Bernhard, of New York.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The local football tempo hit a swifter pace yesterday as Georgetown, last of four major schools to get under way, shook the kinks out of its collective legs and plunged into the weary business of getting in condition for the approaching campaign.

Probably the fastest pace was at Maryland, where Frank Dobson's men experienced their first scrimmage of the season, and emerged unscathed. The maestro took them along at top speed for about 1½ hours and at the finish seemed satisfied with the progress made. He noted several glaring errors that must be corrected, but also was plessantly surprised at the good work of one or two rookies.

At Catholic University "Dutch" Bergman found himself confronted with the old injury jinx when Carmen Pirro, a reserve halfback, fractured a bone in his foot. An x-ray revealed the break, and the boy will be lost for at least three weeks. He was understudying Charlie Munhall, and his absence means a complete revision of Bergman's offensive plans. Johnny Fiorellino also limped into the training room after practice, suffering with a groin injury.

Five men still are absent from George Washington's camp, but four are expected today in tow of "Botchey" Koch. All were visiting their homes in the Southwest. They are Frank Merka, halfback; Duce Keahey, tackle; Ken Batson, halfback, and Murphy Booth, halfback. The fifth, also a backfield candidate, Red Noonan, is A. W. O. L. and Head Coach Jim Pixlee is uncertain whether he will be back in school.

At Old Point Comfort the Hoyas were obliged to remain indoors yesterday morning because of rain, but Coach Jack Hagerty utilized the time by blackboard work. In the afternoon, however, the 39 candidates were issued equipment and trotted out on the Fort Monroe athletic field for a real workout. All appeared to be in excellent condition and Hagerty, anxious to get full steam up, hopes to stage the first scrimmage within a few days.

N. Y. Giants, East's Stars Vie Tonight

40,000 Expected at Polo Grounds for Annual Grid Battle.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 7.—The pick of Eastern college football players, aiming to duplicate the victorious feats of the All-Stars at Chicago and Dallas, tangle with the New York Gridiron Giants at the Polo Grounds in their second annual charity game tomorrow night.

Other all-star aggregations have whipped the Chicago Bears and Green Bay Packers within the last week, but the Eastern collegians will face a veteran squad primed to regain some of the prestige lost by the other two professional elevens.

Close to 40,000 fans may witness the game and contribute to the Herald-Tribune fresh-air fund. Last year the pros won in midsummer temperature. The weather for tomorrow night's game promises to be more suitable for football.

The All-Stars, coached by Andy Kerr, of Colgate, have been in training for three weeks. Their line will average over 200 pounds. Except for the presence of Monk Meyer, lightweight Army star, the backfield also would come close to that of the Giants in heft. Kerr is counting heavily on the passing of Meyer and Mick Kobrosky, Trinity College ace, who is reserve for the Army 140-pounder.

To fortify his passing threat, Kerr has four bucking fullbacks in Vannie Albanese, of Syracuse; Stu Smith, of Bucknell; Joe Dulkie, of Fordham, and John Handrahan, of Dartmouth.

Lew Elverson and Fran Murray, of Penn; Chick Kaufman, of Princeton; Bob LaRue, of Pittsburgh, and George Furey, of Columbia, quarterback, are other all-star ball carriers.

It was the concluding scheduled contest but the teams will clash in the first of a two out of three game play-off series today on the South Ellipse at 5 p. m. War Scares Jump Wheat 5c a Bushel

European Purchases for Day Are Estimated at 1,000,000 Bushels.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—In a war-scare market today, wheat whirled upward almost 5 cents a bushel, and then reacted about 1½ cents because of big profit taking.

Sharpest gain in wheat were scored at Winnipeg, with the maximum about simultaneous with a Hitler address openly emphasizing a tie-up between Germany, Italy and Japan. Adding to market tension were reports that Russia is refusing to ship wheat through the Mediterranean, and that British buyers were not receiving supplies which had been looked for.

European purchases of North American wheat today were estimated at 1,000,000 bushels, of which 200,000 bushels total was from the United States. Buying of 50,000 barrels of United States flour to go to the Orient was also noted.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 2½ to 3½ cents higher compared with Saturday's finish; September, 1.08⅝ to 1.08¾; December, 1.10⅛ to 1.10¼; May, 1.12¼ to 1.12⅜. Corn, 1¾ to 4¾ up; September, 1.01½ to 1.02⅜; December, 64½ to 64⅝; May, 66⅛ to 66¼. Oats, ½ to ⅝ advanced; December, 30⅝, and rye showing 1¾ to 1⅞ bulge; December, 80⅝. The provisions outcome was unchanged to 12 cents dearer.

Steel Operations Cut by Holiday

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 12.5 per cent of capacity, compared with 84.1 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today.

The sharp decline in the rate, steel experts said, was accounted for principally by the Labor Day holiday. A month ago operations averaged 84.6 per cent while a year ago the rate was 68.2 per cent.

Banks Selling U. S. Securities

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday a further decline in member bank holdings of Federal securities. In its weekly condition statement for banks in 101 cities the board said holdings of direct Government obligations fell $39,000,000 to $8,193,000,000 during the week ended September 1. This was $1,070,000,000 under the same week last year.

Fully-guaranteed Federal securities dropped $4,000,000 to $1,130,000,000, or $106,000,000 under the same week last year. Bank holdings of Government obligations have been dropping steadily for several months. Against the decline in these holdings, however, the banks have been increasing their commercial loans.

For the week ended September 1, institutions in the 101 cities had $595,000,000 in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture, advanced on securities as collateral. This was $6,000,000 over the previous week.

Similar loans secured other than by securities and unsecured aggregated $4,043,000,000, an advance of $26,000,000 for the week.

Japan's Credit Weakens With Stress of War

New York, Sept. 7.—Even if the Chinese-Japanese war is terminated soon, considerable capital will be required for the reconstruction of the devastated territories, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. This will tax the limited capital resources of not only China but also of Japan, since numerous textile mills and other industries established by the Japanese in Shanghai have been destroyed. The Japanese government will find it difficult, if not impossible, to obtain new capital abroad, since the war has resulted in a sharp decline in the value of Japanese securities traded in the internatinoal markets. The war has caused the resumption of the export of gold from Japan, and the prospect is that the gold resources of Japan will be greatly diminished if the war should continue for a prolonged period.

Large Adverse Balance.

In view of the fact that Japan's unfavorable trade balance is exceedingly large, that the amount of foreign exchange available within the country is limited, and that exporters to Japan already find it exceedingly difficult to obtain the foreign exchange due them, it is apparent that the country would soon be in a serious position if a further decline in the metallic reserve of the Bank of Japan should occur.

Even before the present military outbreak, Japan was feeling the lack of capital at home. Many Japanese economists believed that the exportation of capital to Manchukuo had been too rapid and that any further borrowing by the government would lead to inflation. Even assuming the final victory for Japan and the occupation of additional Chinese territory, the question of finding capital to develop the newly-acquired territories will still remain. Moreover, it stands to reason that, if the war continues, more and more Japanese loans will have to be floated. This will ultimately lead to currency inflation, which is bound to undermine the very foundation of the Japanese national economy.

Woolworth Sales Dip Under Year Ago

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—August sales of F. W. Woolworth Co. totaled $22,794,904, a decline of 1.2 per cent under the $23,186,353 for August, 1936, the commany announced today. July sales showed a gain of 8.2 per cent over the like 1936 month.

The August decline in sales under the corresponding 1936 month was due to falling of but four Saturdays in the month this year, against five a year ago, it was said. A Saturday is considered about equal to two other shopping days.

Stocks Break Sharply on War Fears in Heaviest Trading for Four Months.

New York, Sept. 7.—Stocks had the worst break of the year, the onslaught of selling coming in two waves. The first was shortly before noon, driving leading stocks down 3 to 9 points, after which some respite was had until the last hour, when another heavy selling volume swept prices down 2 to 4 points more. The stock ticker was late in both the early and late selling.

Stock turnover was around 2,000,000 shares, the largest in months. Government bonds declined, as did other issues, but less precipitately than did stocks. Commodities were mixed. The war news, which seemed to hurt securities so much, was held responsible for a stiff rise in wheat. December wheat closed 2⅞ cents higher at 110⅛ cents a bushel. Dollars were firmer, partly the result of moderate demand for them in exchange for securities.

While a reading of the news this morning and over the holiday weekend gave plenty of cause for anxiety over the future and the cumulative effect of adverse developments during the summer no doubt helped to send stock prices down, little freshness in the news could be found to account for the extreme weakness in stocks. It was perhaps less the bearishness in the outlook, less the strength of the selling forces, than the weakness of the opposition that caused the hasty retreat.

Ominous Pause.

All summer the stock market has held a position which it maintained largely because so few persons were interested in attacking it. Those with stocks found no sufficient reason for disposing of them, and the market was allowed to take care of itself, which it did with indifferent success. Today the increasing weakness of a poor supply of bidders for stocks—foreigners, investment trust, large investors of other sorts and the speculators—came to what looked to be a climax. The market was frightened by a naked view of its own condition. Stocks fell as they did simply because the buying which in former times tempered declines was absent.

The market had the unusual experience of an increase in trading volume which sent the ticker tape a few minutes behind in the early dealings, but later slackened. Meeting the increased offerings the real weakness of the market was uncovered, a weakness which has been giving increasing alarm ever since President Gay of the stock exchange published his views on the matter a short time ago. The market hasn't had a good rally since then.

Treasury Pays More.

Among the day's developments on which attention centered were the new financing by the Treasury, which involves higher interest payments, and the quarrel developing between Russia and Italy. In some quarters the Treasury deal was emphasized as an important factor, but on long run it scarcely can be termed so unless it is feared that eventually the banks will unload a great many Governments on a falling market. Naturally the market for old Government issues fell into line with the higher rates offered on the new refunding issues by declining in price, and each decline causes nervousness among the banks which hold such vast quantities of the issues.

On the longer view, the stiffening money rates will tend to force a reduction in Government spending (assuming a little common sense remains in Washington, or finds its way there) and thereby help to sustain the bond market. Moreover, any serious further fall in Government bonds undoubtedly would bring measures to weaken money rates and support the market from official sources. The weakness in Government bonds, being a symptom of unsound Government finance and economic policy, quickly finds reflection in stocks.

Lack of Confidence.

To sum up the market influences lack of confidence in business recovery or ability to keep at its present level because of the antics of the New Dealers is undoubtedly the major force in the setback. Diversions such as war scares, a temporary drop in steel production, a hint of an extra session of Congres and the like are minor burdens that could be borne without much trouble were it not for the main load.

For the country the most disturbing element in the decline of the stock market is not the losses, real or on paper, now being taken by holders of stocks, but it is the implications of what may be coming in commerce and industry. The stock market still appeals to a great many persons as having considerable ability in forecasting business. The omens seem to say that trade this autumn is not going to be good at least not so good as had been hoped.

Neutrality Law Effect.

The bullish side can be taken, with reliance mainly on the unusually large crops, notwithstanding the fact that the benefits ordinarily flowing from that source will be dissipated in part by renewal of price pegging and bonus plans of the Government, which will tend to cut down export trade. When all is said on the cheerful side, the fact remains that the country certainly has been passed beyond the purely recovery stage in business. Trade from now on will be able to turn downward as easily as to turn upward. Inflation may bring on a considerable boom in activity and prices, but just now the deflation in stocks will tend to depress business enterprise. What will be done about it at Washington can only be guessed, but the New Deal's supply of resources is by no means what it once was.

Foreign Trade.

On the war side the fear of a drop in our foreign trade under neutrality outweighed in many Wall Street persons' minds the danger that this country might be drawn into a conflict. Our new neutrality law, if invoked, would do much to ruin commerce with the Orient, especially in the munitions line, and that probably accentuated the weakness in the steel and allied shares, just as the almost frenzied preparations for war by Japan and other foreign countries in the past two years have done so much to promote activity in those lines. Should formal combat be confined to Japan and China, no diect pressure of consequences would be exerted on our securities markets.

Japanese holdings of our securities are not said to be large, and the Japanese government probably has mobilized and disposed of much of them sometime ago. However, a spread of the fighting would affect not only our own trade, but that of other nations, and thus bear down on slowly reviving world trade, a natural bearish influence on securities markets. The same thing is true of Russia and Italy. The Italian investments on this side went with the winds in Ethiopia, and Russians aren't supposed to have anything but temporary bank balances built up from the recent heavy sales of gold.

Wheat Helped.

Those fearing war easily could envisage a general conflict if they could see Russia, and especially Italy involved and in that case the markets would fall into much difficulty. The case with wheat and a few other commodities is different. Under neutrality food could be shipped to neutral countries easier than could munitions, and rerouted. Moreover, a Russian engagement or fear of one would cut off large wheat supplies that might otherwise come to the world market. War as an actuality or as a possibility usually boosts the wheat market and depresses cotton and stocks.

$600,000,000 New Security Issues in Sight

Some Large Offerings Await Improvement in the Market.

New York, Sept. 7.—Corporate financiers to the amount of approximately $600,000,000 has been planned or is in contemplation for the fall and early winter if the market conditions are favorable. This total embraces only major refunding and new capital operations and will be materially increased if numerous smaller deals are consummated.

The announcement that Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. has called a special stockholders meeting to authorize the stock required in a $30,000,000 convertible issue brought the total of major operations to 11. Bethlehem Steel will offer to stockholders of record September 8 an issue of $48,000,000 convertible debentures, the unsold portion of which will be underwritten by a banking group. The Pure Oil Co. is mailing to stockholders today rights to subscribe to a new issue of $44,244,300 of 5 per cent convertible preferred stock.

Two other great industrial corporations have been discussing plans to come into the market in a big way soon. Armour & Co. has a program of refunding which at one time involved the issuance of $75,000,000 new securities but it is understood that the amount will be materially scaled down unless the market develops a better tone that at present.

Anaconda Financing.

The other industrial enterprise is Anaconda Copper Mining Co. A deal for the refunding of approximately $49,000,000 4½ per cent debentures and the funding of the Chile Copper bank loans, said to be around $20,000,000, has been under consideration for months.

The largest public utility issue contemplated is $85,000,000 securities of the Appalachian Power Co., but it is not considered likely that the whole program will be attempted at one time unless the market improves over its present condition. There are two $80,000,000 utility issues in prospect. Consolidated Edison Co. of New York has applied to the Public Service Commission for a loan of that size, for refunding and also to capitalize plant expenditures. Commonwealth Edison Co. has an ambitious refunding plan involving $80,000,000 new securities. Both these issues may be reduced if the market cannot ttake care of them in single large pieces.

Cotton Rallies With Buying From Abroad

Active Purchasing From Bombay and Liverpool Spurs Markets.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 7.—Foreign buying promoted by nervousness over the European political situation caused cotton to rally today. December sold up from 9.16 to 9.26 and closed at 9.24 with final prices 4 to 16 points net higher.

The market opened 1 to 10 points higher on active Liverpool and Bombay buying. This absorbed Southern selling and although partial reactions occurred, the undertone was generally steady. A large part of trading represented evening-up in advance of the Government cotton crop report to be issued at noon, New York time, tomorrow. Weakness of the stock market brought in some selling but prices turned firmer and closed within a few points of the best for the day on a late covering movement.

Roosevelt Son's Home Here Is RobbedofGems

Furniture was overturned, rugs rolled back and drawers opened and ransacked.

Police said the burglars had entered through a first-floor window. The screen was removed from a window which was not locked.

Finger prints were discovered believing the burglars might return, officials stationed a police guard.

The investigation was being conducted by H. H. Carver, Seventh Precinct detective. Headquarters men also were assigned.

Investigators believed the burglars were intoxicated and probably were boys. The empty bottles indicated the intruders drank unhurriedly as they ransacked the house.

Officials pointed out that the failure of the thieves to locate other valuables also tended to show they had been overcome by drink before the job was completed.

Patent on Color Film Held Up Pending Suit

Depositors Rush Closed Bank After $500,000 Shortage

Armed with their passbooks, hundreds of depositors in the closed Farmers Bank & Trust Co. at Charles Town, W. Va., visited the bank yesterday to discover just how much money they have lost. Federal investigators are holding John Richard Russell, former mayor and assistant cashier, and say that approximately $500,000 is unaccounted for.

Charles Town Depositors Storm Bank to File Claims

Missing Half-Million May Have Supported Racing Syndicate; Depositors Storm Institution to File Claims.

By Howard F. Wentworth.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 7. A new sensation enlivened Charles Town's bank scandal today with reports that John Richard Russell, assistant bank cashier accused of embezzling $500,000, used the money to support a horse racing syndicate.

While depositors stormed the Farmers Bank & Trust Co. throughout the morning to file claims and present proof of accounts, Federal and State authorities were in Berryville, Va., investigating bookmaking connections.

It was learned that warrants for additional arrests will be issued within the next few days. Although refusing to confirm rumors that other bank employes are implicated, investigators are convinced Russell was not alone in a purported plot to reap a fortune "on the ponies."

Twice mayor of this community, Russel, authorities said, spent the vast sum wholly on the race tracks.

In a desperate effort to straighten his tangled accounts, Russel allegedly posted single race bets amounting to thousands of dollars. Not once, said officials, did he appear at a race track. The bets were made through "bookies" here and in neighboring towns, they said.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State police are searching, it was reported, for additional accomplices in Richmond and Martinsburg.

Prosecuting Attorney John T. Porterfield said he would seek indictments against Russell—"and anyone else implicated" from the November grand jury.

Indications that the strange case may develop wider ramifications than anyone expected came tonight with reports that Federal authorities would delve deeply into Russell's income tax report for the past several years. It was intimated that he may also face evasion charges.

The mystery of how Russell, a trusted and respected citizen for 20 years, succeeded in duping bank officials and depositors for nearly three years remains unsolved.

Investigators, it was learned, are checking New York and Chicago banks on the theory Russell secreted his allegedly purloined cash for safekeeping.

Soon after the shortage was discovered, Russell is known to have visited New York and Chicago before surrendering to police and Federal agents at Hafrisburg, Pa., last week.

Although depositors in the bank are assured of returns up to $5,000 through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, it was reported today plans are under way to sell the bank's real estate holdings—estimated at $100,000—to protect the heavy losers.

"STELLA DALLAS"

CHAPTER 3

With her husband Stephen separated from her, and her daughter Laurel in a boarding school, Stella Dallas sinks more and more into a rut. It is only her extreme love for her child which makes her self-conscious when Laurel comes home on a visit accompanied by one of her teachers.

Stella, never dreaming that her flashy dress and blondined hair are a shocking contrast to well-bred Laurel, calls upon Ed Munn to accompany her on a shopping tour for Laurel's birthday party. All of the young girl's school chums and teachers have been invited, and Stella is hoping for a gala celebration.

But on the train Stella and Ed behave in such a rowdy manner, that Miss Phillibrown, Laurel's teacher, misconstrues their relationship. It is soon common gossip, and on the day of the party, no one shows up. Stella and Laurel, refusing to admit the truth, fight back their tears and pretend to enjoy the party all by themselves.

Shortly afterward, Laurel is invited to visit at the luxurious Long Island home of Helen Morrison, her father's first love. The young girl has a gay time in the pleasant atmosphere; she rides and swims with the Morrison boys. But the gayety and lovely surroundings do not lessen her desire to return to her mother.

During Laurel's absence, Stella calls on Stephen's lawyers and defiantly announces that she will neither free her husband nor relinquish their daughter.

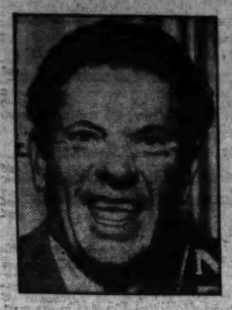
Bob Burns Says—



You hear a lot of these comedian fellas makin' jokes about mother-in-laws, but I'll tell you, there ain't nothin' like 'em if you get a good one.

My Aunt Sophie Ledbetter was one of them kind of good mother-in-laws. She was at her daughter's house one time on her semiannual six months visits when her daughter got in another argument with her husband. It was a terrible fight! My Aunt Sophie Ledbetter called the police and says, "Get down here right away. My son-in-law is havin' another fight with my daughter."

The policeman says, "Well, have your daughter come down to the police station right away and swear out a complaint against her husband." Aunt Sophie said, "Well, she can't come right now—she's busy bumping his head on the floor."

Court Restores Citizenship to Capital Woman

Mrs. Laura Thaw Regains Rights Lost in Marriage to Frenchman.

In a brief ceremony in District Court yesterday, the socially prominent Mrs. Laura Consuelo Kilpatrick Morgan Thaw, of 1327 Thirty-third street northwest, regained the American citizenship she relinquished when she was married to Jean Marie Emmanuel de Maupas, a French national, in 1920.

Born in Lucerne, Switzerland, in 1901 while her father, Harry Hayes Morgan, was the United States consul general there, Mrs. Thaw is the sister of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt and Lady Furness.

Three years after her marriage to the Frenchman, she was divorced. She then married an American, Benjamin Thaw, jr., in Brussels. The Thaws moved to Norway, where Thaw was connected with the United States Legation. Upon his death she returned to this country and found that her marriage to Thaw did not repatriate her.

Under the terms of the Cable act, Mrs. Thaw was eligible for repatriation through the death or divorce of the foreign spouse. Her petition yesterday, presented to Justice Jennings Bailey, was unopposed by the Government and as soon as Mrs. Thaw had renounced her allegiance to France and had pledged her loyalty to the United States, she was admitted to American citizenship.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Most experts abhor finesses and go to considerable lengths to avoid them. This applies particularly to two-way finesses. Let us consider the technique of an expert in the following hand:

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is worthy of comment. South, with two four-card major suits, correctly chose the higher ranking despite the marked superiority of the heart suit. North, with two Aces and very fair distribution, was too strong for a mere single raise in spades and far too weak for a double raise; hence, temporarized with the in-between bid of two diamonds. When South then bid two hearts. North properly jumped in the first named suit, to show that he had distinctly better than a preference.

West opened the club King. Declarer saw that he could get rid of dummy's club on his own heart suit, but that if he guessed the spade Queen wrong the defenders would almost surely take at least three diamonds and the spade Queen. Rather than stake everything on the spade guess he decided to try other measures.

Taking the club Ace, he then ran off the Ace, King and Queen of hearts, discarding dummy's club. He then ruffed his own remaining club with dummy's deuce of spades. A low diamond was then led from dummy; East played the Queen and, when it held, continued with the King. West could see no particular virtue in overtaking the King with the Ace and returning a third round; if East had the remaining diamond this overtake would merely result in immediately establishing dummy's suit, whereas, if declarer had the third diamond, for West to overtake the King and lead a third round would draw a precious trump from East.

In point of fact, the overtake would have been the best play available. West could know by this time that declarer's trump suit had a hole in it. Presumably the Queen was missing. If East's King-Queen of diamonds were blank, East would now be in the horrible position of having to exit with a club which would give declarer a ruff in one hand and a discard in the other, or a trump which would take the guess out of the situation.

On West's failure to overtake, that is precisely the jam in which East found himself. Having no more hearts or diamonds, he had to choose between a club and a trump. Realizing that a trump was tantamount to giving up, he chose the club, hoping that declarer had another one. But declarer discarded his remaining diamond while ruffing in dummy, and then laid down the Ace and King of spades.

It should be noted that, even after getting the ruff and discard, declarer could not afford to take the spade finesse into West's hand; if it lost to the doubleton Queen, a heart return by West might be ruffed. Having picked up the diamond trick, declarer could well afford to concede a trump trick.

25 Union Cooks Picket Grill Here By Sipping Coffee in Noon Rush

Twenty-five members of Local 781, Waiters, Waitresses and Cooks Union, walked into Burt's Grill, 1418 New York avenue northwest, at noon time yesterday, seated themselves in the eight booths, one to a booth, and ordered coffee.

Waiters frantically tried to serve the sit-downers and hustle them out of the restaurant for the noon-day customers. But to no avail. The picketers insisted on lingering over their cups.

But Lopatkin, the proprietor, served the pickets with dollar checks for the coffee. He had a change of heart, however, and hurriedly recaptured the dollar checks. One of the coffee drinkers insisted on holding the overcharge check. Lopatin finally obtained it, and the customers paid the regular 5-cent charge.

"I know everyone of the pickets," he said, "and I won't give them a "reserved seat."

Game in Maryland Reported Plentiful

State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte made that forecast today after surveys of reports from district game wardens. Rabbits, he said, should be especially numerous.

Squirrels will be in season only from October 1 to October 15 this year, and there are very few of them, LeCompte said.

December 1-5—Deer (male deer only), except on the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club, where season is from December 15-24.

January 1-March 15—Muskrat.
